CHICAGO MURDER MYSTERY DEEPENS

HUSBANDS OF SLAIN WOMAN BROUGHT FACE TO FACE AT INQUEST.

ONE CHARGED WITH MURDER

This Done Largely to Compel Attendance—Various Descriptions of Man Who Lured Tango Teacher to Her Death.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Interest in the mysterious murder of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rexroat was very high at the inquest at West Chicago, to which a large number of witnesses were summoned.

The most important witnesses were W. H. Allison, who married the decedent, whose maiden name was Stevens, 17 years ago; and Everett A. Rexroat, the infatuated farmer of Macomb, McDonough county, who married the woman last spring within two weeks of her divorce from Allison. A warrant charging Rexroat with murder was sworn out, but this was largely to compel his attendance at the inquest.

Story of the Murder.

Mrs Allison-Rexroat was murdered at Wayne, a suburb of this city, where many wealthy men have their country homes, on Friday night. She was shot in the head and the body placed on the railroad tracks and she was robbed of jewelry and money of the value of about $400.

She was lured to the spot by a man descriptions of whom vary greatly from tall and slender to short and stocky. Her landlady, Mrs. Victor L. Johnson, and her employer, Frank L. Oleson, at whose school in Chicago she taught the tango, understood that she was to stop at Wheaton by arrangement over the telephone with one "Spencer," known from the manner of his speech as the "man with the drawl."

Carried Only Suitcase.

When she left, Mrs. Rexroat carried a rattan suitcase, containing among other things a pink ball gown and pink slippers. The suitcase has not been found, nor has the pistol with which the murder was committed.

Instead of stopping at Wheaton, according to her apparent agreement with "Spencer," she continued on the interurban railroad to Wayne, accompanied by a man. The next development was the finding of her body.

Allison, before the inquest began, was taken into the room where lay the mutilated body of his former wife and the mother of his three children. He looked long and silently and then burst into tears.

Controls Emotions With Effort.

Rexroat, a tall young man, was subjected to the same ordeal. He controlled his emotions, though his expression was one of wonder and grief. In the undertaker's office the two husbands faced each other, a few feet apart.

Allison moved forward as if to greet the man who had supplanted him in the affections of his wife, but thought better of it and stopped. Rexroat, staring at him, suddenly exclaimed. "My God in heaven, he doesn't think I did it, does he?"

DuPage county, in which Wayne is located, adjoins Cook county (Chicago) on the west, while Macomb, the home of Rexroat, is in McDonough county, only a few miles from the western border of the state.

REPORT SERIES OF MURDERS

Fourth Mystery in Four Months Baffles the Los Angeles Police.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 1.—Except for some circumstantial evidence against Robert Askew, a negro, the police find themselves at a loss to account for the murder of Mrs. Rebecca P. Gay, a Christian Science practitioner, who was found dead Saturday morning in her down town office.

This was the fourth murder in less than as many months in Los Angeles. As with the case of Charles E. Pendell, realty dealer and diamond broker, who also was beaten to death in his offices, the murderer apparently still is at large.

Millionaire Freed of Charge.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 1.—George H. Bixby, a millionaire of Long Beach, charged with having contributed to the downfall of minor young women, was found not guilty by a jury. Bixby was tried on one of two indictments, based on charges preferred against him by [illegible] Barker and Marie [illegible], underaged habitues of a resort.

VIRUS MAY SPREAD CHOLERA

IMPROPER VACCINATION HELD CAUSE IN SWINE HERDS.

Danger in "Virus" From Infected Hogs, Says Minnesota Bulletin.

Minneapolis, Oct. 1.—Statements in the official bulletin on hog cholera issued by the extension division of the university's department of agriculture have new interest in connection with the recent declaration by James J. Hill that hog cholera possibly was being spread by the very treatment given to prevent it. The bulletin states:

"A herd may be infected by improper vaccination methods, and instead of immunizing the hogs it may actually infect them with cholera, if not carefully and judiciously used." And again,

"The experiment station will not furnish virus with serum unless a veterinarian from the station or from the state live stock sanitary board is going to use it, because of the possibility and danger of causing the disease when used by inexperienced persons."

The two terms are explained by the university as follows:

"Virus" and "Serum."

"Hog cholera serum is the clot-free blood obtained from a hog that has been rendered very highly immune against cholera by one of several methods now in use. It takes from one to two months to work a hog up to the point where the blood will contain enough protective substances so that when a small amount of it is injected into another hog the latter will be rendered immune.

"Virus is blood drawn from a hog that is very sick with cholera and about to die. It is virulent or disease-producing blood and contains the actual living germs of cholera and must be handled cautiously."

Of the circumstances when serum only should be used, and those when both serum and virus should be, the bulletin states:

"Well hogs may be treated (vaccinated) with hog cholera serum so that they will not take the disease if exposed later. Such treatment is called immunization. . . . . We advise single treatment (serum only) for herds recently infected. From experience we have learned that it is not a good plan to use serum in herds where the disease has prevailed for a long time, or where a large part of the hogs have died, and where many others are sick.

"The double method (both serum and virus injections) may be used in herds in which cholera has just appeared, or in healthy herds in a locality where cholera has made its appearance."

EARLY COMPLETION OF BILL EXPECTED

TARIFF MEASURE IS LIKELY TO BECOME LAW WITHIN A FEW DAYS.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON WAY

Will Be Taken up in the House and Senate at Once—Cotton Futures Amendment May Cause Some Trouble.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Both houses of congress met this week with the prospect of an early completion of the Democratic tariff bill. Although the conference report probably will not be taken up in the house before tomorrow, and later in the senate, instructions have gone out to absent members to be on hand for the final stages of tariff revision.

Report to Committee.

The conference report has just gone first to the full conference committee the Republican members of which thus far have not seen it or helped in its preparations.

After this it will be reported to the house by Chairman Underwood of the house commerce committee, probably this afternoon. The present plan is to have it lie over until tomorrow before action is demanded. The house will agree to the report, but recommend an amendment in the form of the so-called Smith-Lever cotton futures tax plan.

The document then will go to the senate.

Process While in Senate.

The senate will approve the completed conference report and either agree to the house amendment or demand a new conference. Somewhere in the negotiations the senate Democrats either will have to caucus and agree to accept the house cotton futures plan, or else go counter to the expressed desire of President Wilson and bring about the defeat of the whole cotton futures tax plan for the present session of congress.

Currency reform legislation is expected to take a second position, although the hearings by senate committee will continue thoughout the week.

20,000 LETTERS ASK FOR JOB

Seeker of Government Post Tries Chain System on Department Without Avail.

Washington, Sept. 30.—A male resident of Illinois wants a position as a clerk in the internal revenue service, and some time ago he wrote the secretary of the treasury stating his wishes. Since the receipt of the first letter by Mr. McAdoo, the latter's secretary, Byron Newton, has intercepted 20,000 letters from residents of Illinois, asking the secretary to give the applicant the job he wants, which happens to be under the civil service.

An investigation by the treasury showed that the applicant had 20,000 or more letters printed and the same number of envelopes addressed and stamped and then sent them to his friends and his friends' friends to sign and send to the secretary of the treasury. Every "friend" apparently signed a letter.

The man will not get the berth.

FAIR WEATHER THIS WEEK

Washington Forecast Looks for Unsettled Condition Last Part.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Generally fair weather west of the Rockies, but rain and unsettled weather in the East, South and Central West and somewhat cooler weather, were forecasted for this week by the weather bureau. The predictions are:

"In the Central West and in the Northwest fair weather should prevail after Tuesday until late in the week when unsettled conditions are again indicated.

"Indications point to a week of generally fair weather west of the Rocky mountains except over the far Northwest where rains are expected early in the week and again after the middle of the week.

"Temperatures probably will fall in a day or two over the northern districts, but no extremes in either direction are expected."

Association That Is Fighting Tuberculosis Gives Exact Proportions of Its Double Red Cross.

A special committee of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, of which Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs of Baltimore is chairman, has just announced the exact proportions of the double red cross, the international tuberculosis emblem, which have been adopted for use in the United States. Every organization or institution dealing with tuberculosis will be urged to use the emblem in its correct proportions. Although the double red cross was adopted for use in the United States in 1906 as the symbol of the crusade against tuberculosis, no effort was made to standardize the shape or proportions, with the result that hundreds of differently formed emblems are now being used in this country. After a year of study of the history and artistic merits of all of the designs available, the National association has finally chosen one in which all of the arms are pointed, the two cross-arms being of the same length. The width of the cross is taken as the unit in determining the proportions. The length of the lower left is seven units, the arms are three units on either side, the point above the arms two and one-half units and the distance between the arms one and one-half units. These measurements hold good for any size.

DIDN'T KNOW

That Coffee Was Causing Her Trouble.

So common is the use of coffee as a beverage, many do not know that it is the cause of many obscure ails which are often attributed to other things.

The easiest way to find out for oneself is to quit the coffee for a while, at least, and note results. A Virginia lady found out in this way, and also learned of a new beverage that is wholesome as well as pleasant to drink. She writes:

"I am 40 years old and all my life, up to a year and a half ago, I had been a coffee drinker.

"Dyspepsia, severe headaches and heart weakness made me feel sometimes as though I was about to die. After drinking a cup or two of hot coffee, my heart would go like a clock without a pendulum. At other times it would almost stop and I was so nervous I did not like to be alone.

"If I took a walk for exercise, as soon as I was out of sight of the house I'd feel as if I was sinking, and this would frighten me terribly. My limbs would utterly refuse to support me, and the pity of it all was, I did not know that coffee was causing the trouble.

"Reading in the papers that many persons were relieved of such ailments by leaving off coffee and drinking Postum, I got my husband to bring home a package. We made it according to directions and I liked the first cup. Its rich, snappy flavor was delicious.

"I have been using Postum about eighteen months and to my great joy, digestion is good, my nerves and heart are all right, in fact, I am a well woman once more, thanks to Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for copy of the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

GOES TO PRISON FOR EFFECT

NEW YORK MAN BEGINS SELF-IMPOSED STAY.

Says He Will Live Like Convict and Do the Hardest Work for the Experience.

Auburn, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the New York state prison reform commission appointed to investigate and suggest prison reform legislation, began a self-imposed term in Auburn prison. The primary purpose is to determine the psychological effect of prison confinement upon a man.

Mr. Osborne outlined his purpose to the convicts and while conceding that there are many shortcomings in such an experiment, justified his purpose by this statement:

"I have a feeling that after I have really lived among you, marched in your lines, shared your food, gone to the same stone cells at night and in the morning looked at God's sunlight through those same iron bars—that then, and not until then, can I feel the knowledge which will break down the barriers between my soul and the souls of my brothers.

"I expect to begin serving my sentence this week at hard labor and am coming to live like one of you, to be housed, clothed, fed and disciplined like one of you."

Mr. Osborne was asked if he would accept dungeon punishment if he broke a rule and replied that he absolutely expected no consideration if he was guilty of any infraction.

British Statesmen Proud to Acknowledge the Benefits Conferred by Their Better Halves.

Compliments have frequently been paid by famous statesmen to their wives. It will be remembered how Disraeli dedicated "Sybil" "to the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife," and when a certain wit, who never allowed good taste to wait on his humor, was rallying Disraeli on his marriage, he received the cutting reply: "I married from a motive which I do not expect you to understand—gratitude."

Mr. Gladstone, in old age, said to a friend: "My wife has known every political secret I have ever had, and has never betrayed my confidence," and others have borne tribute to "the tender vigilance which sustained and prolonged his years."

Lady Salisbury, with no aptitude or inclination for public life, was the stay, confidante and social helpmeet of her husband.

At a dinner to Mrs. Lloyd George in London, at which she was presented with a replica of a portrait of her husband, a letter was read from Mr. Lloyd George expressing deep appreciation of the "great kindness which prompts my friends to present to the brave little woman who is my wife a portrait of the troublesome person whom she has stood by through good and evil report."

NOT WANTED AS CO-LABORER

Church Was Minister's Appointment and He Needed No Help From Canine Friend.

A wide-awake minister visited a neighborhood for the first time. When aroused his explosive tones were rather startling. A good brother who always occupied a side seat near the pulpit was accompanied by his dog, and the dog lay regularly just in front of the pulpit. All went well till an explosive sentence from the minister led the dog to raise his head and howl, much to the amusement of the people. This occurred several times, and each time his dogship arose to the occasion and let off a chorus of howls. The audience was convulsed with laughter. The preacher, however, easily won the day when he turned to the dog's owner and said:

"Brother, it may be your dog has a call to preach; I do not know about that. But this is my appointment."

HEAD BEGAN TO FESTER

P. O. Box 55, Greenville, Cal.—"Last fall my baby boy, two and a half years old, fell and hit the back of his head on the door-casing, cutting quite a gash. I thought it would heal right away, so when I picked him up and washed his head I put some ——— on it and he soon was playing again. The next morning there was a scab over it, but after a few days it began to fester and other sores came near it. They commenced at his neck and gradually spread to the top of his head. The eruption was like ulcerated pimples and itched and irritated him awfully, especially at night, when he would scratch and dig his head. I had hard work to keep him from scratching them. His hair fell out where the sores were thickest.

"The sores looked red and mattered. I had all his hair cut close to his head so I could get the Cuticura Ointment on well night and morning and I washed his head well with the Cuticura Soap. After a few applications night and morning the itching stopped and no more new sores came. In two weeks it was healed nicely and in three weeks he was cured and there is not even a scar on his head." (Signed) Mrs. A. B. Wolters, Dec. 12, 1912.

The class was discussing animals—how they walked, got up, etc. After the explained the cow's method of rising to her feet, the teacher asked:

"Do you know any other animal that gets up like a cow?" Silence reigned for a moment, then one little girl timidly raised her hand.

"What is it?" asked the teacher.

"A calf," was the reply.

DRINKING INTOXICANTS DECREASES EFFICIENCY.

Dr. Alsberg Says That Alcohol Is Not Really a Stimulant.

Dr. Carl Alsberg, successor to Dr. Wiley as head of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, finds nothing to commend in alcoholic drinks. He declares that drinking decreases a man's efficiency, both mentally and physically. He says that on the rare occasions when he drinks a glass of beer with his lunch he finds that it has a distinctly depressing effect on him all the afternoon.

"The science of pharmacology has shown that alcohol is not actually stimulating," says Dr. Alsberg. "It seems to be so because of the state of exultation which it induces and because of the talkativeness and the increase of the pulse rate and the flushing of the skin which it causes. All this, however, is not proof that it is a stimulant, as scientists understand this term. The fact that the individual feels a sense of well being or warmth or stimulation is not proof that he actually has been stimulated.

DR. ALSBERG.

"As a matter of fact, alcohol depresses most functions. It differs from most other depressing agents by affecting the highest functions of the brain and nervous system first. The finer powers of attention, judgment and reflection are lost, while the rest of the mental activities may still be normal. This explains the behavior of persons under the influence of alcoholic beverages.

"When a soldier appears to gain courage under the influence of alcohol it is not because he has become more courageous, but because he pays less attention to danger and reflects less upon it. The orator under the influence of alcohol does not allow himself to be disturbed or embarrassed by paying attention to minor matters and he therefore talks more freely and boldly. His judgment concerning himself is impaired. He therefore loses some of the modesty and self restraint which is natural.

"Many a man is astonished at the ease with which, under the influence of alcohol, he is able to express his thoughts, and his really judgment on matters which he would not dare consider when quite sober. All this is not due to actual stimulation, but to the depressing action of alcohol upon a man's highest intellectual centers. These control the lower functions of the brain. When they are depressed or paralyzed by alcohol, this controlling function is lost more or less. The result is to give the appearance of greater efficiency, when, as a matter of fact, it is usually less."

AN OFFICIAL WARNING.

The following temperance manifesto has been indorsed by the Prussian minister of education and is to be shortly sent out by the German health office to be posted to public places:

Do not give your child a single drop of wine.

Not a drop of beer.

Not a drop of spirits.

Why?

Because alcohol in every form and even in small doses injures children.

How?

First.—It checks their physical and intellectual development.

Second.—Consumption of spirits brings with it exhaustion and causes weariness and inattention in school children.

Third.—Alcohol helps to increase disobedience to parents.

Fourth.—It causes sleeplessness and premature nervousness.

Fifth.—It causes infant mortality.

Sixth.—It weakens the body's powers of resistance and prepares the ground in this way for many sicknesses.

Seventh.—It increases the duration of various sicknesses.

Eighth.—It awakens thirst continually and can in this way make men habitual drinkers.

FAILURES.

A man may fail in a dozen different lines of activity and then succeed brilliantly in a phase wherein he was unconscious of any ability. The world's greatest and best men were failures in some line—failures many times before failure was crowned with success.

DIZZY, HEADACHY, SICK, "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

SMOKES AS SURGEON WORKS.

Train Victim Calmly Watches Doctor Amputate Limb Crushed Beneath Wheels.

Fargo.—After his leg had been mangled beneath the wheels of a freight train, Carl Bryans calmly watched City Physician Kaess while he completed the amputation of the limb just below the hip. Bryans smoked a cigaret and talked with bystanders during the operation. He was later removed to a hospital and the leg was dressed.

Dr. Kaess believes that the man's wonderful nerve will insure his recovery.

Bryans stated during the operation, which was performed beside the tracks where he was injured, that he had worked in the harvest fields this summer and was on his way to Minneapolis. He attempted to catch a freight passing through the city, but his coat became entangled in a switch arm and he was thrown beneath the wheels of the moving train. He says he had no living relatives.

ROBBERIES QUITE FREQUENT.

Four Hankinson Stores Are Entered and Mail Pouch Is Rifled in Twelve Hours.

Hankinson.—Four robberies of local stores, in each of which the burglars were greeted by empty cash drawers, and the theft and rifling of a pouch of mail, constitutes a twelve-hour crime record in Hankinson.

The Whippermann Hardware store, Wexler Clothing store, Green Drug store and Umbreit Meat market were raided, but in each place the men only obtained small quantities of merchandise.

The mail pouch rifled contained considerable parcel post matter.

Threshing Practically Done.

Fargo.—Reports from all sections of North Dakota indicate the practical completion of threshing. In the northern and western counties more work remains to be done, and in other sections of the state there is some flax and occasional odds and ends to be cleared up; but at least 90 per cent of the wheat, oats and barley raised in North Dakota this year has been threshed. In the Red river counties practically all the work has been completed. In the central section of the state more than half of the machines have pulled in for the season.

Potato Buyers in N. D.

Fargo.—There is a rush of potato buyers from the southwest to North Dakota and western Minnesota. The drouth in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and other states has caused an unusual demand for the North Dakota tubers. The prevailing price is now sixty cents. Some deals are made at less than these figures, but no sorted potatoes are sold much lower. The buyers have been coming in for two weeks and there are additions almost daily.

Speedy Justice for Bootlegger.

Langdon. — John Krueger is convinced that justice does not always have leaden feet. He was arrested for bringing liquor across the international line and selling it. Rather than remain in jail indefinitely he entered a plea of guilty, was taken before Judge Kneeshaw and three days after his arrest was on his way to the state prison to serve an eight month's sentence.

Contracts Let For Extension.

Stanton.—All doubt about the extension of the Northern Pacific west from here to Golden Valley was set at rest by the awarding of the contracts for laying the steel to Roberts Brothers of Chicago and for constructing the bridges to Baraboo and Weaver, of Minneapolis. The extension will be about thirty-five miles and the grading is practically completed.

Father's Shot Kills Son.

Hillsboro.—While engaged in target practice on his farm, D. J. Wickes fatally shot Joseph Wickes, his son. Several men had fired the revolver, and at the time of the accident the elder Wickes held the weapon. It was accidentally discharged and the bullet entered the boy's neck, severing the spinal cord. Death resulted a few hours later.

FARMERS TIRE OF SERMONS

N. D. Commission Says They Are As Anxious As the Business Men to Improve Lands

Bismarck.—North Dakota farmers are tired of being preached at; they are just as anxious as the business men to make the most out of their land; they know they must adopt modern and better farming methods to accomplish that end. Farmers, too, are operating on a narrower margin of profit than any other industry. This, in substance, is the view expressed by a special commission appointed by Governor L. B. Hanna to investigate the rural community needs of the state, the report being transmitted to the American rural commission at Washington, D. C.

"The farmers of North Dakota are tired of being preached at," says the commission, which consists of W. P. Tuttle, W. A. Scott and J. E. Phelan. "Present methods in national government tend to place them on a competitive basis with the farmers of the world; they must get all they can out of their land at the least possible expense.

"We recommend further efforts and extension of agricultural and manual training in all the schools, extension of demonstration farms, also better farming association. We recommend untiring effort in maintaining a cordial relationship between the farmers and their brethren of the banks, the railroads and the commercial centers.

"The uplift is on in North Dakota, and the intelligence of the farmers is equal to the task. We believe the farmers are operating on a narrower margin of profit, investment and labor considered than any other interest in the country."

SWEETHEART BETRAYS BOY.

Lavish Gifts to Girl Land Suspect in Devils Lake Jail.

Devils Lake.—Lavish gifts showered on his sweetheart, Miss Devey Osborne of Bowling Green, Ohio, more recently of Springbrook, N. D., led to the arrest by Special Agent Frank Hogan of Delbert Nelson, 19 years old, charged with holding up Joseph Ford, an operator for the Great Northern in this city and robbing him of $497.79 of the company's funds. Nelson waived preliminary examination and was held for trial. Through Miss Osborne Agent Hogan learned that Nelson had purchased a watch worth $50 and a locket and a bracelet, presenting them to her. She displayed her possessions and showed the agent a photograph of her sweetheart. Nelson also entrusted $250 to her care last Friday.

TAKES FLING AT DEMOCRATS.

Civil Service Not Observed Says Congressman Helgesen.

Grand Forks.—Democrats are doing away almost entirely with the civil service department of the federal government, overriding it at every opportunity and, if they continue their present methods, they will practically wreck the service, according to Congressman H. T. Helgesen, who is at his home at Milton, N. D.

"In their scramble for appointments, and in the efforts of the administration to please them, the democrats are overriding every principle of civil service. They are practically abolishing it, and, as southern members generally admit, they are going on the theory that 'to the victor belongs the spoils.'"

Cholera Bars Hog Exhibits.

Wahpeton. — The Richland county fair opened Tuesday. There was no swine on exhibition, as a result of the provalence of cholera in some parts of the state. Governor Eberhart of Minnesota was one of the speakers and President Worst of North Dakota Agricultural college was another. The race program was an interesting one and there was a varied line of amusements, including a wild west show.

Markley May Run in Second.

Bismarck. — It has been rumored that Charles E. Markley, of Pleasant Lake, will be a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in the Second North Dakota district. Mr. Markley has refused to state his position but it is believed that he will run. He is a progressive republican and is at present a deputy bank examiner.

Brakeman Shot by Tramp.

Jamestown.—William Paulson, a Northern Pacific brakeman, was shot Saturday by a tramp, the bullet striking a rib on the right side and glancing off and passing through the fleshy part of the arm. It is supposed the man shot Paulson when he was ordered from a westbound freight.

Municipal League Meets in Jan.

Fargo.—Fargo is again to entertain the North Dakota Municipal league. The session will be held the third week in January.

TO VARY THE MENU

SOME NEW WAYS OF SERVING WELL-KNOWN DISHES.

Apple Soup Is Nothing of a Novelty, But Always Appreciated—How to Prepare and Serve Up Savory Marrow Bones.

To vary the every-day menu, says Housekeeper, it is a good idea to keep up with new ways of serving well-known dishes. Those who know how can make much out of little, so, though the larder may seem almost empty, the table may look as well filled as on a market day.

Apple Soup.—Peel and quarter a quart of cooking apples, carefully removing the cores; put into a kettle with three pints of white stock, pepper, salt, and three cloves; boil until tender, strain and reheat, adding a cup of sweet cream and a dash of nutmeg and a tablespoon of sugar. Serve with toast squares.

Cucumber Soup.—Pare, quarter, and remove the seeds from two cucumbers, cut in thick slices, and cover with boiling water to draw out the poison. Let them stand ten minutes, then have ready two quarts of white stock, add the cucumbers, and boil slowly until very tender, adding a bunch of sweet herbs. Strain and season and add a gill of cream, in which two eggs have been well beaten. Serve at once with toast sippets.

Savory Marrow Bones.—Have marrow bones cut the desired length and boil them in a linen cloth in fair water long enough to release the marrow. Stuff them with a mixture of sweetbreads, mushrooms, the marrow and savory seasoning, and bake in a moderate oven. When done, they may be fitted with a paper collar and a black ribbon tie, tied in a square bow and a paper fool's cap, and served on lace paper doilies.

Deviled Salad Balls.—Take the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs and devil them, with salt, pepper, olive oil, dash of Worcestershire sauce, to form the paste, then form into little balls; roll in powdered nuts and drop into the salad among the leaves. Cover with mayonnaise.

Layer Cake, Soft Frosting.—In laying up a cake with soft frosting, each layer may be sprinkled with powdered pistachio nuts. To make it especially pretty for a festival occasion, the top may be decorated with candied mint and rose leaves.

In making the dressing for any salad, remember that only the very best olive oil that can be purchased is allowable, for the delicacy and flavor of a salad may be ruined if a cheap, heavy oil is used. And such oil may also make a salad most indigestible, whereas the pure oil is most healthful and nourishing.

Single Raspberry Shortcakes.

Two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-third cup butter, one-third teaspoon salt, about two-thirds cup milk, crushed fruit, sugar. Sift together flour, salt and baking powder, rub in the butter lightly and mix to a light dough with the milk. Cut into rounds like biscuits and bake in a quick oven. When done, split, spread lightly with butter and put some of the crushed berries, sweetened to taste, between and on top of the cakes. Serve plain or with whipped cream.

Savory Onions.

After you have boiled peeled young onions until tender, drain them and pour over them a cupful of good stock and simmer in this for ten minutes. Take out the onions with a split spoon and keep them hot while you thicken the gravy with a tablespoon of browned flour rubbed to a paste with the same amount of butter. Stir until smooth and thick; add a teaspoon kitchen bouquet and one of good catsup, with salt and pepper to taste and pour over the onions.

Corned Beef Gravy.

If your family always want gravy on their potatoes if they can get it, they can have it even with corned beef. Take some of the liquor, not too fat, thicken with flour and season with a little pepper. Do not salt until you taste it and see if necessary. If the corned beef is of good flavor this makes an acceptable gravy.

Headache Cure.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee is a safe remedy for bilious headache.

Scotch Quick Cakes.

Rub three-quarters of a pound of butter into one pound of sifted flour, mix up into it a pound of granulated sugar and a large tablespoonful of powdered cinnamon. Mix to a dough with three well beaten eggs, roll out into a sheet, cut into round cakes and bake in a quick oven. These cakes require but a few minutes to cook.

Cleaning Silk.

Egg stains on silk can usually be removed by rubbing with ordinary table salt.

Sorry for the Chickens.

SYNOPSIS.

Fran arrives at Hamilton Gregory's home in Littleburg, but finds him absent conducting the choir at a camp meeting. She repairs thither in search of him. Laughs during the service and is asked to leave. Abbott Ashton, superintendent of schools, escorts Fran from the tent. He tells her Gregory is a wealthy man, deeply interested in charity work, and a pillar of the church. Ashton becomes greatly interested in Fran and while taking leave of her, holds her hand and is seen by Sapphira Clinton, sister of Robert Clinton, chairman of the school board. Fran tells Gregory she wants a home with him. Grace Noir, Gregory's private secretary, takes a violent dislike to Fran and advises her to go away at once. Fran blinks at a twenty-year-old secret, and Gregory in agitation asks Grace to leave the room. Fran relates the story of how Gregory married a young girl at Springfield while attending college and then deserted her. Fran is the child of that marriage. Gregory had married his present wife three years before the death of Fran's mother. Fran takes a liking to Mrs. Gregory. Gregory explains that Fran is the daughter of a very dear friend who is dead. Fran agrees to the story. Mrs. Gregory insists on her making her home with them and takes her to her arms. Fran declares the secretary must go. Grace begins nagging tactics in an effort to drive Fran from the Gregory home. Abbott, while taking a walk along at midnight, finds Fran on a bridge telling her fortune by cards. She tells Abbott that she is the famous lion tamer, Bol Nonpareil. She tired of circus life and acquired a house. Grace tells of seeing Fran come home after midnight with a man. She guesses part of the story and surprises the rest from Abbott. She decides to ask Bob Clinton to go to Springfield to investigate Fran's story. Fran enlists Abbott in her battle against Grace. Fran offers her services to Gregory as secretary during the temporary absence of Grace. The latter, hearing of Fran's purpose, returns and interrupts a touching scene between father and daughter. Grace tells Gregory she intends to marry Clinton and quit his service. He declares that is exactly condition his work without her. Carried away by passion, he takes her in his arms. Fran walks in on them, and declares that Grace must leave the house at once. To Gregory's consternation he learns of Clinton's mission to Springfield. Clinton returns from Springfield and, at Fran's request, Ashton urges him not to disclose what he has learned. On Abbott's assurance that Grace will leave Gregory at once, Clinton agrees to keep silent. Driven into a corner by the threat of exposure, Gregory is forced to dismiss Grace. Grace is offered the job of bookkeeper in Clinton's grocery store. Gregory declares he will kill himself if she marries Clinton. Gregory's infatuation leads him to seek Grace at the grocery. He finds her alone and tells her the story of his past. Grace points out that as he married the present Mrs. Gregory before the death of Fran's mother, he is not now legally married. They decide to flee at once.

"We'd—better separate," Gregory hoarsely whispered. "We'll meet at the station."

"No. If he sees us, what would be the use? Anyway, he'll have to know tomorrow . . . everybody will know tomorrow! No," said Grace, overcoming a slight indecision, "the important thing is not to be stopped, whoever sees. Come this way."

"But there's no chance out, that way," Gregory returned, with the obstinacy of the weak. "And if he does see us, it won't do to be seeming to try to hide."

"But we are hiding," Grace said decisively. "Possibly we can keep moving about, and he will go away."

"Why should we hide, anyhow?" demanded Gregory, with sudden show of spirit.

To that, she made no reply. If he didn't know, what was the use to tell him?

Gregory moved on, but glanced back over his shoulder. "Now, he's getting down," he said in agitation. "He's making his way right toward us. All right, let him come!"

"In here—quick!" cried Grace, dragging him to one side. Quick!"

A voice stopped them with, "Your tickets, please."

"Oh, no," wailed Gregory, "not into a show, Grace. We can't go into a show. It's—it's impossible."

She spoke rapidly: "We must. We'll be safe in there, because no one would ever suppose we'd go into such a place."

"But Grace," said Gregory firmly, "I cannot—I will not go into a show."

The voice addressed him again: "It's first-class in every particular, lady. There is nothing here to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of the most fastidious. See those fierce man-eating lions that have been captured in the remotest jungles of Africa—"

Gregory looked back.

Robert Clinton was drawing nearer. As yet he had not discovered them, but his eyes, grown fiercer and more impatient, were never at rest.

With a groan, Gregory thrust some money into the showman's hand, and he and Grace mingled with the noisy, eight-seers flocking under the black tent.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Street Fair.

Littleburg was trembling under the fearful din of a carnival too big for it, when Abbott Ashton, after his weeks of absence returned to find himself at Hamilton Gregory's door. He discovered old Mrs. Jefferson in the front room—this July night—because old age is on no friendly terms with failing deaf but every window was open.

"Come in," she cried, delighted at sight of his handsome, smiling face—he had been smiling most of the time during his drive from Shumtown with Robert Clinton. "Here I sit by the window, where sometimes I imagine I hear a faint, far-away sound. I judge it's from some carnival band. Take this chair and listen attentively; your ears are younger—now!"

Abbott did not get all of this because of the Gargantuan roar that swept through the window, but he gravely tilted his head, then took the proffered ear-trumpet: "You are right," he said, "I hear something."

"It's the street fair," she announced triumphantly. "But sometimes it's louder. How fine you look Abbott—just as if your conscience doesn't hurt you for disappearing without leaving a clue to the mystery. You needn't be looking around, sir. Fran isn't here."

"I wonder where she is?" Abbott smiled.

"I'm dreadfully impatient to tell her the good news. Mrs. Jefferson, I'm to teach in a college—it's a much bigger thing than the position I lost here. And I have a chance to work out some ideas that I know Fran will like. I used to think that everything ought to be left precisely as it is, because it's been that way so long—I mean the church; and schools; and—and society. But I've made up my mind that nothing is right, unless it works right."

Mrs. Jefferson listened in desperate eagerness. "A watch?" she hazarded.

"Exactly," he responded hastily. "If a watch doesn't run, what's the use of its being pretty? And if churches develop a gift of tongue instead of character, what's the value of their prayers and songs? And I've concluded that if schools don't teach us how to live, they have the wrong kind of springs and wheels. Where is Fran, Mrs. Jefferson?"

"Still," she temporized, "we can't get along without watches, Abbott."

"No, nor schools, nor churches. But they must have good works. Is Fran down at the fair, do you think?"

The other bent toward him stealthily. "Ask where Mrs. Gregory is," she said, wonderfully significant.

"Well?"

"Abbott, listen: She's gone a-visiting!"

"Visiting!" Abbott was surprised.

"Yes, visiting, she that hasn't been off this place to visit a soul for ages. I tell you, boy, times have changed, here. Maybe you think nobody'd be left at home to visit; but Fran has found that there is a woman in town that she used to know, and the woman has a mighty sick child, and Lucy has gone to sit by it, so the mother can rest. Think of that, Abbott, think of Lucy going anywhere. My! Have you heard that we've lost a secretary at this place? I mean the future Mrs. Bob. Yes, she's gone. I'd as soon have thought of the courthouse going packed up and set in the parlor."

Mrs. Jefferson drew back and said succinctly: "Fran did it!"

Her cap quivered as she leaned forward again. "Get her to tell you all about it. We daresn't speak about it much because of the neighbors. We conspired, Fran and I. Yes, she's down at the carnival, you boy!"

Abbott hastily departed. Later he found himself in a cloud-burst of confetti, on the "city square" and when he had cleared his eyes of the red and white snow, he saw Fran disappearing like a bit of crimson glass at the bottom of a human kaleidoscope. Fran had thrown the confetti; then fled—how much brighter she was than all the other shifting units of humanity.

He fought his way toward her deliberately, finding she was about to be submerged. Was she actually trying to elude him?

"Fran!" he cried reproachfully as he reached her side. "How have you the heart to run away from me after I've been lost for weeks? Nobody knew I'd ever be found."

Fran gave up flight, and stopped to look at him. A smile slipped from the corner of one eye, to gut caught at the corner of her demure mouth. "When you disappeared, you left me yourself. A friend always does. I've had you all the time."

Abbott glowed. "Still, it isn't exactly the same as if I had been able to touch your hand. Suppose we shake hands, little friend; what do you say?"

"I don't say anything," Fran retorted; "I just shake."

Her handclasp was as hearty that he was slightly disconcerted. Was her friendship so great that it left no room in her heart for something greater.

"I want to talk to you, Fran, talk and talk, oh, just about all the long night through! Come, let me take you back home . . ."

"Home? Me? Ridiculous! But I'll tell you the best place that ever was, for the kind of talking you and I want to do to each other. Abbott, it won't matter to you—will it?—at what place I say to meet me, at about half-past nine?"

"Why, Fran! It's not eight o'clock," Abbott remonstrated, glancing toward the courthouse clock to find it stopped, and then consulting his watch. "Do you think I am going to wait till—"

"Till half-past nine," said Fran, nonchalantly. "Very well, then."

"But what will we do in the meantime, if we're not to talk till—"

"We?" she mocked him. "Listen, Abbott, don't look so cross. I've a friend in town with a sick daughter, and she's a real friend so I must go to help her, a while."

He was both mystified and disappointed. "I didn't know you had any such friends in Littleburg," he remonstrated, remembering how unkind tongues had set the village against her.

Fran threw back her head, and her gesture was full of pride and confidence. "Oh!" she cried, "the town is full of my friends."

He could only stare at her in dumb amazement.

"All right, then," she said with the greatest cheerfulness, "at half-past nine. You understand the date—nine-thirty. Of course you wouldn't have me desert a friend in trouble. Where shall we meet, Abbott—at nine-thirty? Shall we say, at the Snake-Eater's?"

"Go, Fran," he exclaimed, "I'll wait for you as long as I must, even if it's the eternity of nine-thirty; and I'd go anywhere in the world to meet you, even to the den of the Snake-Eater."

Her Handclasp Was So Hearty That He Was Slightly Disconcerted.

"That's the way for a friend—to talk!" she declared, suddenly radiant—a full Fran-sun, now, instead of the slender penetrating Fran-beam.

Seeing a leg-lined lane opening before her, she darted forward.

Abbott called: "But I can't promise to talk to you as a friend, when we meet—I mean, just as a friend."

Fran looked back at him, still dazzling. "I only ask you to treat me as well! she said with assumed acidity, "as we are told we ought to treat our—enemies."

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Conquerer.

After the extinguishment of the Fran-beam, Abbott wanted to be alone, to meditate on stellar and solar brightness, but in this vociferous wilderness, reflection was impossible. One could not even escape recognition, one could not even detach oneself from a Simon Jefferson.

"Got back to town again, hey?" said Simon. That was enough about Abbott; Simon passed at once to a more interesting theme: "Taken in the Lion Show, yet?"

"I'm just waiting for nine-thirty. . . . I have an engagement." Futile words, indeed, since it was now only eight o'clock.

"You come with me, then, I know all the ropes. Hey? Oh, yes, I know mother thinks me in bed—for goodness' sake don't tell on me, she'd be scared to death. But actually, old man, this carnival is good for my heart. 'Tian't like going to church, one bit. Preaching makes me feel oppressed, and that's what scares me—feeling oppressed." He rubbed his grizzled hair nervously. "Just for fear somebody'd go tell, I've had to sneak into all those shows like I'd been a thief in the night."

Simon urged Abbott along in the direction taken, but a few minutes before, by Hamilton Gregory and Grace Noir. "You see," Simon panted, "when the girl fell off the trapeze—heard about that, hey? Mother was overjoyed, thinking I'd missed the sickening sight. But bless your soul!—I was right at the front, hanging on to the railing, and I saw it all. Why, she pretty near fell on me. Her foot slipped just so—" Simon extended his leg with some agility.

"Was she killed?" Abbott asked, concealing his astonishment over Simon's evident acquaintance with the black tent before which they had paused.

"Well," Simon reluctantly conceded, "n-n-no, she wasn't to say killed—but dreadfully bruised up, Abbott, very painful. I saw it all; this carnival has put new life into me—here! Get your ticket in a fifty, or all the seats'll be taken. You can't stand there like that . . . give me your quarter, I know how to jump in and get first place. That ticket agent knows me; I've been in five times."

From a high platform before the black tent, a voice came through a megaphone: "The Big Show. The Big Show. See those enormous lions riding in baby carriages while La Gonizetti makes other lions dance the fandango to her violin. See those—"

"Here, Abbott, follow!" called the breathless Simon Jefferson. "Of course we'll see what's there—no use listening to him, like an introduction in a novel of Scott's telling it all first. You follow me."

Abbott laughed aloud at Simon's ability as they pushed their way under the tent.

"Uh-huh, now see that!" groaned Simon reproachfully, as he looked about. "Every seat taken. I tell you, you've got to lift your feet to get into this show. Well, hang on to the rope—don't let anybody gouge you out of standing room."

At least two-thirds of the space under the tent was taken up by tiers of seats formed of thin, and apparently fragile, blue planks, springy to the foot and descending to the air. From hardened ground to fringed tent-ceiling, these overlapping rows of narrow boards were brimming with men, women and children who, tenacious of their holdings, seemed each to contain in his pockets the feet of him who sat immediately behind.

The seats faced an immense cage which rose almost to the roof. As yet it was empty, but smaller adjoining cages promised an animated arena when the signal should be given.

Gregory had Grace Noir had sought refuge on the highest seat, where they might overlook the crowd here, with heads bent forward as it to avoid the canvas, they stood so, encumbered by ropes and it is the man's to provide for folk, Littleburg citizens were rarely to be seen at such shows until a later and more fashionable hour. Gregory was relieved to find his topmost plank filled with strangers.

"All goes well," he said, pressing Grace's hand. "Nobody will find out that we have been in here."

"Watch for Mr. Clinton," Grace counseled cautiously. "If he comes in, stoop lower."

"They're all strangers, Grace. Providence is with us—there's Simon Jefferson!" He was too amazed to think of concealment.

"Hush! Yes—and Abbott Ashton."

Gregory pulled his hat over his eyes.

Into the tent streamed a fresh body of sight-seers. Simon, swinging to the rope that was stretched in front of the big cage, grumbled at being elbowed by weary mothers and broad-chested farmers.

The band entered and squatted upon blue boxes in one corner. Showy red coats were removed in deference to sweltering heat, and melody presided in undress. Three bears, two clowns and a bicycle sharpened interest in what was to come, wheeling the mind upon jokes blunter than the intelligence of the audience. Even the band ceased playing, though that had not seemed possible; its depressing anathinos had not only subdued the bears, rendering them as harmless as kittens, but had mournfully depressed the audience.

Into this atmosphere of tamed inertness, suddenly flashed a little figure whose quivering vitality communicated electric thrills. Even the clowns moved less like treadmill horses, as they took their stations at the smaller cages, waiting to lift the gates that would admit the restless lions into the central cage.

The form that had appeared—one knew not whence—was that of a slight woman, dressed in a short skirt of blue, and bodice of white satin. The trimmings which ran in all directions were rich in pendants of gold and rubies. Above all, there was the alarming mystery of a crimson mask which effectually hid the woman's face.

Simon whispered into Abbott's always unready ear: "That isn't La Gonizetti. Wonder what this means? La Gonizetti is much more of a woman than this one, and she doesn't wear a mask, or much of anything else. La Gonizetti doesn't care who sees her. Why, this is nothing but a mere—I tell you now, if she ain't on to her job, I mean to have my money back." Simon glowered.

Abbott stared in great perplexity. "Then who is she?" he exclaimed "Simon—doesn't she remind you of—of some one we know?"

"Naw. She's got on La Gonizetti's dress, and her voice has the show-girl's clangy-tin-panny-whangdoodle, but that's all I recognize."

Abbott wondered that Simon failed to notice the similarity between the show-girl's movements and those of Fran. This woman had Fran's form. To be sure the voice was entirely different, but the rapidity and decisiveness of action, and the air of authority, were Fran's very own. However, the show-girl's hands were as dark as an Italian's, while Fran's were—well, not so dark, at any rate.

Abbott's brow did not relax. He stood motionless, staring at everything before him with painful intentness.

Up near the roof, Gregory and Grace scarcely observed the entrance of the "lion-tamer." Secured from espial, absorbed in each other, they were able, thanks to the surrounding clamor of voices, to discuss their future plans with some degree of confidence.

Simon told Abbott—"Anyway, the amateur would rub up against those beasts, so I guess it's all right. They ain't but two long; bill says ten; mean that wrote the bill was the other eight, I reckon."

A PLAIN FACT

We have written this ad for you to think and think hard of what we are saying. First of all it seems that until the Jew came to New Salem some merchants didn't know what sale making meant and since the Jew has been here he is making those merchants sit up and take notice. Some of the merchants, got the habit of making a sale at least once a year for it must look good to them. We ask you why but of course you wouldn't know. Well, to tell you, the Jew is the only one who gives Good Merchandise cheap, consequently he is the one to get the business and he doesn't believe in making 100 to 150 per cent profit on everything he sells like one merchant who has the habit of making sales every year. It must be that he is losing trade more every year, and he should. If he believed in "live and live," the public would never have to send away for their needs. It must be remembered that the public will not stand to pay three prices for what merchandise is worth; they would be fools that would. If business isn't just to their satisfaction for nine months, they will import a man to make a sale for them paying him 10 per cent of the people's hard earned money, and you help pay it out of every dollar's worth you buy. We ask you again, "Would a good reliable merchant have to import a man to teach him how to tempt the public for a month, to put a price-list headed with shoe-strings, and handkerchiefs, and a box of 'grab' which is as old as the hills?" We give shoe-strings away all the year 'round; we don't have to import a sale-manager for that. When we conduct a sale we do it ourselves and the people benefit by it. We let you make the 10 per cent and 15 per cent of our profit. Also, we give to each customer that buys $75.00 worth of fall supplies, a 100 lb. sack of the best patent flour. When you come to us it will be a big saving on everything that you buy and we can give you those things much quicker than the merchant who gives 10 per cent

Where can you benefit more in buying your fall supply than in our

New Salem Has New Doctor.

Dr. S. Fisher of New Salem, the new proprietor of the Nilson drug store, calls the attention of the Almont people to the change in management, thru the columns of the Arena. The advertisement is in another column.

Dr. Fisher needs no introduction to many of the people on the Slope because he has practised very successfully at Dickinson for eight years. As an introduction to those who have recently come to this vicinity, we reproduce the following:

NEW SALEM JOURNAL:—Dr. Fisher is nicely established in New Salem, having taken over Dr. Bursma's medical practice and the Nilson drug store. He comes here from Milwaukee where he has spent two and a half years in successful practice, and adding to that eight years practice previously in Dickinson, one is rejoiced to know that the town is to gain a man of experience rather than a new practitioner. His wife and child will take up their residence here as soon as he can dispose of their Milwaukee property. The Doctor ran a private hospital at Dickinson, during his sojourn there and his coming to New Salem may mean the furthering of some such movement here.
