Some Hints for New Settlers And to Older Ones As Well.

Pointed, Pertinent, Pithy Pieces
of Practical Advice to Farmers.

HINTS FOR NEW SETTLERS.

The practical farmer uses much of his time in winter in planning the next season's work, and to the man who is preparing to emigrate to new land in the spring, this laying of definite plans for the next season's operations is of even greater importance. Wasted effort and wasted money, in starting up on new land, is an all too common thing in the west in these days, all from a lack of well laid definite plans.

The plans for the buildings and the season's operations should be worked out just as far as possible the winter before coming out.

The first thing to be considered, if the choice of land has been made, is the house, as shelter of some sort will be the first thing needed. Tests are a great help in this connection.

As the settler's means is never sufficient to cover all he would like to do the first year, it is necessary to leave many things undone, or delay their doing for another season.

It is vital importance that every dollar of money and every hour of effort be expended to the best advantage possible, or he will be at the end of six months like so many others, wondering where all the time and all the money has gone.

I have in mind chiefly the man with the family. The plan for the house, be it ever so small, should be worked out to the last detail before starting, including a bill of lumber necessary, including doors, windows, nails, etc., and enough of everything should be included to avoid a special trip to the railroad for more material.

The greatest economy possible, both in time and money, commensurate with comfort, should be used in the buildings, as the proper tillage of the land is the all important thing.

With those coming in the spring, the usual plan is to board up the frame on the outside and leave the inside finish until fall.

This inside finish is quite a problem with many. Recently a number of different materials known under the general head of "wall boards" have been put on the market, that seem to just meet the requirements.

They will keep out the cold and are easily applied as they are made to fit standard widths in studding on which they are nailed direct. Common ceiling is both expensive and unsatisfactory. Shingles are by far the best roofing material, and should be used if economy is not too great a factor.

A temporary roof can be made to do service for a few years, made simply of boards covered with one or two piles of good tar paper, and this covered with an inch or two of dirt, with enough gravel over it to prevent blowing. This roof is cool in summer and warm in winter, it is entirely weather proof, and answers the purpose in every way except in looks.

Always plan for the future, and remember the shack we intend to use later for a barn, chicken house or granary, generally has to do service as a dwelling for a number of years.

Always dig a cellar under the house and have a little stairway go down out of one of the rooms, or the room if you have but one, as this is as valuable to the housewife as a room above ground.

In nearly all of our western soils, the walls stand well and cellars are never damp.

One of the best as well as the cheapest plans I know of for a barn or shed for all live stock, including chickens, is a side hill cut down, with ~~rows and~~ scraps, to the level in front, or it can go below this line if a wide runway is dug out to the ground level.

It should be seven or eight feet deep on the back with a roof of boards and narrow battens, which is very satisfactory if the boards are grooved near the edges under the bats.

This can be done with a small grooving plane, choosing boards with no knots near the edge, or stock boards grooved for this purpose may be had from most dealers at a slight additional cost. The front side and ends can be built up with studs.

A manger is made along the back-side, and small doors for putting in the hay made in the roof above. The hay can then be stacked along the back, if the sidehill is not too steep, making a very handy arrangement for feeding.

A plan I worked out last fall for the inside finish for a cheap house, is the best I know of for a man who has more time than cash on hand late in the fall.

I took clay and gravel in the proportion of one part clay to five parts gravel, and mixed it fairly dry, then tamped it in between the studding, using a board nailed on to the studding with cleats to facilitate its taking off. When filed to the top of the board which can be of any convenient length and should be two inches thick, it is taken off and moved up and the progress repeated until the top of the wall is reached.

The mixture should be just dry enough so it will stand without the board as soon as tamped in. Cleats of split lath were used on the side of the studding to prevent the possibility of the material falling out when dry. These walls dried without cracking. It maybe I used an unusual brand of clay but anything except gumbo would do for the purpose if mixed dry enough to stand immediately after tamping in.

TRUE STORY

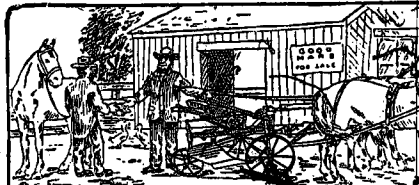

Men who own automobiles began putting their money in the bank when they were boys and kept at it. You are never too young to begin a good habit.

We'll pay 5 per cent interest on the money you put in our bank and compound the interest every 6 months.

"YES, SHE'S A GOOD HORSE ALL RIGHT, BUT I'VE GOT NO USE FOR HER NOW THAT I'VE GOT AN EMERSON FOOT LIFT PLOW."

With five horses you can sell one, buy this Gang, do better work and more of it and have $50 to $75 to put into pigs, chickens or young stock that is growing into dollars, not only work days, but nights and Sundays. The proceeds of an investment of this kind in an Emerson Foot Lift Gang properly handled will give your boy a nice start when he goes for himself and will go a long way toward keeping him on the farm where he will doubtless turn out a successful man—an honor to your name—and lay up $2 too $1 in any other business.

Come in and let me show you why the Emerson Foot Lift Gang, plowing 6 inches deep, pulls a horse lighter than any other plow doing the same amount of work.

North Dakota

The census shows that this state has made a most unparalleled development during the past ten years.

The growth will be even greater during the next decade.
What a time to be brought into the world, the fish, the healthy climate, the live character of its citizens have had something to do with this progress. These things induced the rapid extension of the railroad systems, which has
the influence to do provide above all, North Dakota

the rapid development of the newspapers, and your paper has had a great part
to play in this. Each subscriber

Loss of a Tree.
A fir tree 20 high back of the Lewis grover has been leased for a period of 15 years, to be used as a telephone pole.

The owner and lessee of the tree is Mrs. Mary Bratton. She leased the tree to the Lewis grover company.
This arrangement was described in the Lewis grover report above. The Woodland grover stands 100 feet
high, and is one of the Robert Burr Clark grovers. Correspondence addressed to Mrs. Bratton.

A rumor which has been current here for some time that the Milwaukee will build thru from Bribane to Almont and thence northward to Canada to the immense coal fields of the Canadian Northwest. We ardently hope it is true
as that will make this town and Almont, best towns in this section of the state.

We have no use for the itinerant booze vender, nor for the local organization call a blind pig, nor for the legalized saloon—in fact we have no use for the liquor or the liquor dealer at all and it is the plan of the people of this place to keep these nefarious peddlers away.
