Go After the Dollar, Not Only Larimore

"Wherever you find a dollar you find a yankee and the yankee usually gets the dollar." Is a line that appeared not long since in an eastern newspaper.

The question which interests every North Dakota farmer is how the yankee farmer extracted the dollar from the rocky, barren hills of old New England. The way he did it was to use his head to figure out how he could get hold of a few cows, then build a silo and feed them corn, the hay, the clover, the straw and the great quantities of other products that annually wait to waste on his farm.

He found the old dairy cow a mighty safe bank in which to invest a few dollars for she worked 24 hours in the day every day in the year and returned compound interest twice daily. She represented a small investment with large, continuous and quick returns. She converted raw, unmarketable products of the farm into finished articles of human food which are in constant demand everywhere. It might be added that wherever you find a cow you find the dollar and the cow produces the dollar, so go after the cow and the dollar.

N. H. Becklund has been gathering a number of specimens of grain shown in the vicinity for the Morton county exhibit at the Industrial Exposition to be held in Bismarck, October 1 to 13. If the Almont samples can be surpassed by the grain from any other section there must be two places that can claim to have been the garden of Eden.

Wednesday afternoon, Messrs. and Mesdames, Morris Smith and Peter Vollrath, Miss Emma Vollrath and niece Anna Beck, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vollrath of the Almont Cafe. After spending several pleasant hours in this place they returned to their several homes in New Salem, taking with them Master Eric Vollerath who will visit his grandparents for a few days.

Miss Ruth Sherwood who has been spending the last three weeks visiting friends at Des Moines and at other points in Oliver and Morton counties, returned home Wednesday afternoon, and reports having enjoyed every minute of her short summer vacation.

Miss Florence Dean was the guest of friends in this place Wednesday evening, and incidentally took in the dance at Jacobson's farm, some distance in the country. She left for Hebron on Thursday afternoon.

E. J. Massey of Mandan, expert machinist at the Tobin & Plittinger garage, spent Wednesday and a part of Thursday, in this place, examining the merits of an Overland motorcar, for Mandan people. At the time of his return to Mandan, the deal was still pending.

Rev. R. Alexander spent last Friday and Saturday at Bismarck, looking after business matters and visiting his ministerial brethren.

Louis Larson of Carson, spent Sunday in Almont, visiting his friends. He left overland, Sunday night, for his home.

Walter Larson who has been in Carson visiting his brother, Edulis, stopped in Almont for a few hours Thursday to visit old friends and he was on his way home to Carson.

Mrs. Edna Salzen left Thursday for a short visit to Mandan friends.

Case of Miskaton Identity.
President Tait was out for his afternoon walk in Washington one day when a blonde-haired little girl ran out, a foot of him, in a blue dress, and exclaimed, a shrill voice:
"I know who you are!"
The president, thinking it not at all unusual that she should possess this information, but willing to gratify her, asked:
"Well, who am I?"
"Ah," she said, "evidently, 'you're Humphry Dumpty.'"—Popular Magazine.

The Other Way Round.
A good little story, long current in England, is just now gaining American circulation. It is for leading characters Rodney Kipling and Dorothy Drew. Mr. Gleditsius is a little girl-child. Kipling was visiting Hawarden, and, being fond of children, devoted himself to little Miss Dorothy until her anxious mother expressed the hope that the child had been "working the great author."
"Oh, so, mamma," spoke up Dorothy, before any one else had a chance to say anything, "but you have no idea how Mr. Kipling has been worrying me!"

Wise Doctor Gives Pastum to Conscientious.

A wise doctor tries to give nature its best chance by saving the little strength of the already exhausted patient, and building up wasted energy with simple but powerful nourishment.

"Five years ago," writes a doctor, "I commenced to use Pastum to my own family instead of coffee." (It's a well known fact that too is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same as is found in coffee.) "I was so well pleased with the results that I had two grocers place it in stock, guaranteeing its sale."
"I then commenced to recommend it to my patients in place of coffee, as a nutritious beverage. The consequence is, every day I receive orders for it, as it has become a household necessity in many homes."
"I'm sure I'm praying Pastum as often as my own to save the delicate. Medicine in almost every case of indigestion and nervousness I treat, and with the best results."
"When I first introduced it into my family, it is quite sure to remain. I still continue to use it and prescribe it to families with the same results."
"In consequence from pneumonia, typhoid fever and other cases I give it as a liquid, cooled with milk. You may see the effect of a tablespoon any way you see fit." Name given by Pastum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
"I have used the liquid Pastum in 100 cases. The result has been a complete cure. A doctor has announced his assistance to the national third party movement."

NARROW ESCAPE

Three Men Nearly Killed When Auto Ran Into Big Hole.

Langdon.—Dr. J. F. Sylvester, Fred Skinner and Will Hoop had an experience that they will not care to go through again very soon. In fact one of the men is almost enough for a lifetime. While going along a high grade near the Hugh McDowell farm in Mr. Hoop's automobile, they ran into a place in the road which had been washed out by recent rains, about six feet deep and an actual distance across, into which the car fell. It was not until the car had stopped that it was noticed, along one side of a large metal culvert and a small cart of earth had remained on top of it. The car was not, however, which made it appear at a distance as though it was only a small hole in the center of the road, over which the car had fallen.

However, when a few feet away Mr. Hoop saw the real condition of the road and tried to stop his machine, but it was too late. Dr. Sylvester, who was in the back seat, was thrown clear of the machine across the culvert into the road, while Mr. Skinner, who was with him in the back seat, was sent into the ditch into three feet of water. Mr. Hoop was held in his seat by the steering wheel and went down with the machine, but for some time he was not aware of his own injuries were a few slight cuts from the broken glass of the wind shield. The other two were not at all injured, but no bones were broken. The car was badly jammed up, but like its occupants got away rather lightly, considering the stop took. It was indeed fortunate that none of the party was killed, and perhaps the moderate rate of speed at which they were going was what saved them.

INDIGNITIES BLAMED

Kerbaine Found in Room, Not Reached by the Flames.

Fargo.—Fito (though) of an ordinary Fargo, Minn., party, who arrived in the Northern Pacific Hotel in Valley City and stayed in the hotel nearly 15 years. The reported attempt to burn the Northern Pacific hotel is the second within a short time.

The fire started almost immediately after it is believed to have been set, but the flames quickly spread through the dining room, kitchen and the cook's room. The fire was located in a separate building. The flames spread so rapidly and the smoke became so dense it was thought that the hotel would be entirely destroyed before the guests could escape.

Many in their nightgowns gained the ground by the escape, while others were carried out, though no one was injured. When the flames had extinguished the blaze before the dining room, kitchen and the cook's room. The cook's clothes were salvaged. Authorities are working on the case attempting to obtain evidence on the perpetrators. It is thought by some that the attempt was made to get revenge on the cook. The cook, Mrs. Kerbaine, is known to no one who bears him a grudge. No arrests have been made. The loss of the building will not exceed $2,000 and is fully covered by insurance.

TRAIN OF TWINE

$2,375 Charges on Big Shipment Rushed into North Dakota.

Fargo.—With the express tickets calling for nearly $2,375 in charges, the biggest package ever taken out of Minneapolis went forward through the Great Northern Express company to the Great Northern Express company 150,000 pounds of binding twine for rush shipment to this place.

Five cars were pulled into a train when the special pulled out of Minneapolis. Old Doc Yak's million dollar train with $1,875 million charges on it looked like a big business.

Heavy loading of binding twine to meet the famine in the grain fields where the bumper crop of this year has caused a shortage of twine. Records, has taken 1,250,000 pounds of twine out of Minneapolis by express so far this season, according to estimates from all the railway stations at that place.

When Mr. Evans was pulled out, it was the scarcity of binding twine that still exists in many localities, notwithstanding the abundance of production in all the mills of the country and the rushing of twine into the fields.

Buried in Sand.
Ambrose.—Jack Irons, laborer working for Contractor Hines, had a narrow escape from death while he and Iver Nelson were hauling sand and cement for Ambrose cement works. The sides of the pit caved in, catching Mr. Evans and completely burying him. Mr. Nelson soon had the sand above him removed, but his head was above ground. This gave him a chance to breathe until the weight of the sand was removed. Mr. Nelson said he is said to have been about five tons.

They were getting sand at Black's place, about two miles from town. Mr. Nelson said they had been working; the sand simply dropped as if by magic. "This was the last I saw of my companions until I had the sand on my head and back. What a relief to leave that to me. I never showed sand so black in my life as I did; for a few moments."

When Mr. Evans was pulled out, it was apparently very little the worse from the experience. He drove his team home and showed up for work the next morning, a little lame, and a little bit sore.

Face Serious Charge.
Botticlaus.—August Hoff was placed under arrest on a charge of housebreaking and burglary in the case of a woman's car held to district court on a bond of $5,000. He was unable to secure bail and was committed to the custody of the sheriff. Complainant witness is Leah, daughter of Fred Hoff, a niece of the accused.

Dickson.—Dapety Sheriff Frank Moore and two assistants, came to the penitentiary with Ed. Wain who received a four and a half year sentence at Bowman for horse stealing. Judge Crawford went overland Friday to Bowman, a long trip distance of 200 miles or more. It is reported that the man could be taken to Dismalark at once. Wain was seen at the penitentiary the jail after the horse was placed under bond to keep the peace.

CHILD'S FACE ALL RED SPOTS

311 N. 5th St., Terre Haute, Ind.—My little nephew, a boy of four years of age, had a face all red spots. It was little red spots at first, then he would rub and scratch and water blisters would form, and whenever the water blisters would come until his face was covered with them. He would cry and fret. His mother got some medicine, but it did not do any good. He would scream and cry and fret. We hardly knew him. His little face was all red spots and blisters. So I begged him to let me put some Cuticura Ointment on them. After a few days the blisters were washed his face in the warm soap. The little blisters burst by pressing the Cuticura Soap and putting on the Cuticura Ointment and his face got all well and it did not leave a scar. He was entirely cured in about one week and a half. SYNOPSIS.

Richard Lightfoot, an American with an African English accent, arrives in a small town in Colorado. He is a man of mystery, and his presence causes a stir among the townsfolk. He is seen to be in possession of a large sum of money, and his movements are watched with interest. He is eventually identified as a man who has been in the employ of a certain individual, and his true identity is revealed. The story follows his adventures and the various encounters he has with the townsfolk, including a man named Billings who is a collector of curiosities.

"Oh, You Go to Bed."

"He, he!" he giggled. "Woke up and remembered had promised Florence Partridge of the Partridge Drovers a box of slippers. Got, she calls at last; so I piled out and shot off a note to my floral, special delivery. Jessa trying to find out from that infernal card back there when's the first collection for the box below. You don't know, do you?"

By Jove, I hardly know what to do if I was regularly bowled over, don't you know. I was up against a crisis—that's what—oh, my! "Oh, I say, you know—" I started re-arranging, and just then I gasped with relief at the welcome sight of Jenkins peering round the door frame behind my visitor's back. His finger was on his lip and he beckoned me earnestly. At that moment old whitehair shoved his chair up to the table, switched on the reading-lamp and reached for a magazine. "My Jove, the very thing!" I agreed. "For he'll know where the chub belongs. A river, tall him, if he gets a move on, hurry!" I slipped back into the room as Jenkins disappeared. The jolly old barnacle and discarded his cigarette and was critically selecting a cigar from my humidor. "This old chap, he said; 'very delicately put, won't keep you up another minute. Believe I'd like a drink first, though. If you don't mind.' Devilish bored as I was, I detected the easiest escape was to humor him. "All right," I said, leaving the door open and stepping into the room. "Water!" he exclaimed, following me in. "Say, don't get funny; it's not becoming to you." He looked at me as if I were a stranger. "That's infernally rotten Scotch, I say!" he exclaimed with a sort of snarl. "Regular call, by George!" "I was glad Billings' best time for it had been a present from him only the week before. "Suppose I'll have to go the way, he grumbled; and grinning at me familiarly, he poured himself a drink he tossed off, neat. I reflected that perhaps he would go quietly now. "Well," I said, "if you expect your anxious to get to your quarters, so I'll say good night." "I wanted my hat," that snout to fetch him," I thought. "Of course, then, no matter how jolly corked he may be in my grasp his head felt like a small boiling stone, but when I glanced at it I saw that it was not unusual. The old cork pumped my arm solemnly and cast his eyes to the ceiling. "Pare-we-el, old friends!" he murmured in a husky throat, deflecting the corners of his mouth and wagging his bald pate. "If I don't see you again I'll have the shawls brought!"

And then, instead of going down like the old fool that flop down into Billings' favorite chair and reach for Billings' cigarettes that he had left on the table. He was in a hurry to get to his quarters, so I'll say good night. "I wanted my hat," that snout to fetch him," I thought. "Of course, then, no matter how jolly corked he may be in my grasp his head felt like a small boiling stone, but when I glanced at it I saw that it was not unusual. "If I don't see you again I'll have the shawls brought!"

He shifted around, while I was looking, and I got a good look at him. He was a man of about 50, with a graying beard and a pair of eyes that were as sharp as a hawk's. He was wearing a dark suit and a white shirt with a high collar. He looked at me with a steady gaze, and I felt that I was being studied. "Suppose you take a quiet at this hour," I suggested, the tailor of the company. "You've been on this beat so long." "Pare-we-el, old friends!" he murmured in a husky throat, deflecting the corners of his mouth and wagging his bald pate. "If I don't see you again I'll have the shawls brought!"

around like you had a pain. "Then he went on to say anything on anything—'he looked up, holding the ruby in the light. 'And talking how little I dream of sleeping any more than that when I came to my tonight!'"

By Jove, this was a little too much even for an easy-going chap like myself. The jolly fellow will turn, you know.

Dash me, before I knew what I was doing even, I had moved to his side and jerked the ruby from his hand. My face felt like a hot-water bottle as I did it.

"You haven't got it yet," I said, "and I'll take devilish good care you don't get it either." "He fell back as though from a blow. "Why—why, old chap! Why, Lightfoot!" he gasped. "What's the matter—that makes you look at me like that?"

"Your liberties have gone just a bit too far, don't you know," I said, looking steadily in his baby old eyes. "I've had enough of you, by Jove, that's all!"

He stared at me, and I could hear him breathing like a blacksmith's bellows. I would never have thought he'd be such a fool.

Slowly his hand came out, and dash me if it wasn't shaking like he had the devilium what-it-is-um. But for his life, his face would have been as white as his hypocritical old whitehair.

"Is this some infernal joke?" His face summoned a sickly smile that almost instantly faded and he backed back to his side. "Why, old fellow, you don't think that way about me, do you? As for the ruby, I—I don't want it now, but you must accept my apology for anything I've done, and—ah—let me get away."

There was a short laugh from the door.

"Likely enough," said Omer O'Keefe, his big figure swinging forward with long strides. "Keep him quiet, Jim!"

He stared himself between us with a grin.

"You're it again, Popsy! Jiga up! Will you go quietly?"

It was a good job to see how completely the old scoundrel was taken aback. His wide dilated heavy eyes shifted from O'Keefe to me and back again. It was a nervous business.

I motioned to Jenkins to close the door of my friend's bedroom. So far, he had evidently slept serenely through all the trouble, and, if possible, I wanted to avoid arousing his anger. For a fat man, Billings had the grace of a temper when stirred up over anything like an imposition upon his property. He had the grace of a lion for him to appear on the scene and learn about his wallet and his treasured ruby that I had rescued.

CHAPTER XI
Iron Nerve.

I just stood in the doorway, staring. Couldn't say a word, my throat was that paralyzed. First time, you know, I'd ever seen a real burglar or jolly looker, and he was so different from what I had expected.

But I knew now, of course, that the policeman was right and that the respectable-looking old gentleman was no other than the desperate criminal described as "Foxy Gringo." But for the intervention of outside assistance, double-bills and all, I might have had our throats cut in the consciousness of old geeter.

He was so abashed that he did not see me, nor the two hemoets piled above my shoulder.

"Up to his old tricks," O'Keefe whispered. "We've got him in the act, Jim!"

"Great!" breathed Tim. "What won't the captain say?"

O'Keefe's breath thumped my ear again and swept my nose. I've never seen beer or sauerkraut since but what I think of it!

"Got your stick ready?" he was saying. "Well, not, I say, my chapo. Braxton's a quick shooper, they say. When we jump him, better give him the club right off!"

Tim whispered an impatient murmur, and explained the situation. The officers nodded reassuringly. "Nough said," one of them commented. "We'll have him out, sir."

The janitor, who had been cautious or sighting through the door within, came running out.

"He shifted around, while I was looking, and I got a good look at him. He was a man of about 50, with a graying beard and a pair of eyes that were as sharp as a hawk's. FEEDER RACKS SAVE FOODER AND LABOR

Self-feeder racks for supplying rations to sheep or cattle are not only the means of saving considerable quantities of hay, but also made at the Colorado experiment station are the means of saving a great deal of hay. One lot of lambs at this grower's (which had a self-feeder rack, and another lot which had no rack on the ground) was fed in common with many other lots of lambs. The results of this feeding were practically the same, the lot feeding from the self-feeder averaging only one pound more than the lot which was fed the American Agricultural. Also the grain consumed varied but little, the only difference being that the lot on the self-feeder rack ate 100 pounds more of hay, and those eating off the ground consumed 73 pounds more of hay for each 100 pounds of grain. This indicates a difference of approximately 20 per cent in favor of the self-feeder rack. It makes a difference of 12 cents in the cost of feeding 100 pounds of grain. These results were secured on a lot of lambs at $10 per ton. With a higher price the difference would be correspondingly greater.

These self-feeder racks cost $1 per hundred, but completed they had the ordinary capacity of four lambs per feeding rack. These racks are not only economical, but they are also very durable. They are made of iron, and are capable of holding a large quantity of feed. They are also very easy to use, and require little labor to operate. They are a great saving to the farmer, and are well worth the investment.

KEY TO SUCCESS ON DAIRY FARM

More Can be Accomplished When Farmer and Animals are Care-Free and Contented in a Kind.

(By G. L. OUTMAN)

The dairyman who is looking for results will not allow the dog or the small boy to worry his cows. He knows that if he wants a well filled pail they must not be frightened but kept quiet and content.

The greatest of feed cattle is sure to weed out the one that is continually bawling, when it should be grazing for the simple reason that there is more rest in the grazing of a cow at such a time. The stock content to feed upon the good pasture at hand and their busy themselves trying to break into forbidden fields. It is possible that nearly as good as the ones that make the most gain in weight.

The hen that is dogged every time she finds a nice soft place to stretch is not the one that makes the best egg record. She may be hard on the garden, but she will not lay eggs that do not discourage her natural efforts and then expect her to be best for you.

It is a mistake to be compelled to fight the stock continually cannot get a full day's work, or at least if it does have a less in stalling, which eventually tells on the health of the animal. Neither can it do its best with an ill-fitting harness. The horse that is comfortable and in good spirits is the one which makes the most of his power. For a fat man, Billings had the grace of a lion for him to appear on the scene and learn about his wallet and his treasured ruby that I had rescued.

Married at Taylor.

One of the late events in which Almont is interested was the marriage of Miss Agnes Helen Gullickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Gullickson, and Mr. Harland M. Silversnail, Thursday evening at 9 o'clock, August 15, at the home of the bride's parents, nine miles south of Taylor, N. D. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Leunke of Dickinson, and only the immediate relatives of the two were present at the marriage.

On Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Silversnail came to Almont and began housekeeping in the Mandan Mercantile Co. house.

They will be 'at home' after September 15.

Joe Pederson was a Bismarck visitor, Thursday afternoon.

O. B. Dibble of the Twin Cities, and representing a machinery concern, spent Wednesday in this village, looking after business matters.

Misses Ida and Anna Johnson of the Heart River country, were east bound passengers on No. 8, Friday morning.

Earl Calvert of Mandan, was an over Sunday visitor in Almont.

Edward Tibesars of Carl, transacted business in this berg the first of the week.

One of the most encouraging signs of the permanent prosperity of the people of this section, is the generous patronage of the dairy cow.

State's Attorney H. R. Jitling transacted business in Almont, the latter part of the week.

Ben Bird came from his ranch and spent some time in town looking after business matters, Friday.

Mrs. Joe Pederson who has been visiting in Bismarck for a few days returned home Friday afternoon.

You Are Going This Year and This Is Your Road

Minnesota State Fair And Exposition

HAMLIN

Midway between Minneapolis and Saint Paul

Sept. 2-7, Inclusive

It is needless to say that the Minnesota State Fair is one of the greatest if not the greatest exhibition of its kind produced by any state in the Union. The management has set the pace where others follow, and things entirely new are to be introduced at this year's exposition. Fifty counties will exhibit; the buildings have been improved and the grounds beautified; aviation features, a modern farm kitchen, farm boys' encampment, military display, special speed features are but a few of the attractions.

You will enjoy it and profit by it.

Convenient train service—sleeping cars on night trains—parlor cars on day trains, dining cars—service to satisfy all none better. Ask for your ticket via the

Additional Local

B. J. Hassland of Valley City, who is the representative of the Bergsath Plak Co., of Fargo, was a business visitor to Almont the latter part of the week.

If you have anything for sale, if you wish to buy a certain thing, or if you wish to communicate a certain amount of information to a large number of people, and at the least expense, use the columns of this paper.

One of the most enjoyable and largely attended social dances of this year, was the one given Wednesday evening in the new barn at the Jacobson farm, by the young people of Almont. The night was just right, the music excellent, and young people were in the mood most conducive to make the dance a decided social success.

Thursday afternoon a strange procession was noticed coming to town, which as it neared the city was found to be a "horse-mobile"—and some who are familiar with the habits of the horse, state that a faint smile was noticed on the faces of the team as it made its triumphant entrance into the town dragging their rival at their heels.

Land Owners, Stop for a Minute and Think of the Great Amount of Information you Receive thru the columns of the Arena, about the Conditions of the Crop, the Rain-fall, the Seasons, and Hundreds of other things that Keep You Posted about your Land, while you are a 100 or a 1000 miles away! For only 3 Cents a week you can have all this information delivered to you in any part of the United States.

That the eyes of the home buyer are focused upon Almont and the country around, as four of five different parties of land seekers have been in this vicinity during the past week. All who have come and viewed the country state they have never seen a better crop than is being harvested right here in the Almont section. A number of the tracts of land are required to have been sold to eastern parties who intend to come west and improve the land.

Almont Standard of Almont, Kansas, arrived here Thursday to look over his land which is located in the Heart Alger country. He is engaged in fruit growing on an extensive scale in his home section, and reports a very fine yield of all kinds of fruit this year. In speaking of the general conditions of the crop along the route he traveled in coming to Almont, he said "Everywhere along the way the crops looked better than any time previous when I have made the trip." His wife and child accompanied him on the trip, and all will remain here from a week to ten days.

The coming Sunday will be the last time that Rev. W. Alexander will conduct services at the Public schoolhouse and at Almont, as he intends to leave in a few days for Chicago to enter McCormack Seminary. Everyone here will greatly regret his departure from Almont, and as he is to leave soon all wish him a happy, successful year at college; also a bright and prosperous future in the path he is to go. From time to time Rev. Mr. Myers will arrange for services until a regular occupant for the place can be secured.

L. G. Clark, representative of the Western Land Security Co., of the Twin Cities, brought a party of landseekers from Pennington, Wisconsin, to look over some land in this section of Morton county. The party arrived here, late Thursday night and after spending the night at the Merchants Hotel, left early Friday morning to look over some land. Two of the men of the party own some land in Adams county and are so well pleased with it that they want more North Dakota land. Those who were of the party were: Fred L. Boebel, F. L. Brecker, L. Haywood and C. Hopkins, all of Pennington, Wis.
