RELATIONS WITH OTHER NATIONS

Foreign Affairs Is Subject of Message From President.

IS FIRST ONE OF A SERIES

Merit System in Consular and Diplomatic Corps—Department of State's Good Work for Latin American Republics.

Washington, Dec. 3.—President Taft submitted to congress today the first of several messages. It was devoted to our foreign relations and in part was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The foreign relations of the United States actually, and potentially affect the state of the Union to a degree not widely realized and hardly surmised by any other factor in the welfare of the whole nation.

The position of the United States in the moral, intellectual, and material relations of the family of nations should be a matter of vital interest to every patriotic citizen. The national prosperity and power impose upon us duties which we can not shirk if we are to be true to our ideals. The tremendous growth of the export trade of the United States has already made that trade a very real factor in the industrial and commercial prosperity of the country.

With the development of our industries the foreign commerce of the United States must rapidly become a still more essential factor in its economic welfare. Whether we have a far-reaching and wise diplomacy and are not recklessly plunged into unnecessary wars, and whether our foreign policies are based upon an intelligent grasp of present-day world conditions and a clear view of the potentialities of the future, or are governed by a temporary and timid expediency or by narrow views befitting an infant nation, are questions in the alternative consideration of which must convince any thoughtful citizen that no department of national policy offers greater opportunity for promoting the interests of the whole people on the one hand, or greater chance on the other of permanent national injury, than that which deals with the foreign relations of the United States.

The fundamental foreign policies of the United States should be raised high above the conflict of partisanship and wholly dissociated from differences as to domestic policy. In its foreign affairs the United States should present the world a united front. The intellectual, financial and industrial interests of the country and the publicist, the wage earner, the farmer, and citizen of whatever occupation must co-operate in a spirit of such patriotism to promote national solidarity which is indispensable to national efficiency and to the attainment of national ideals.

The relations of the United States with all foreign powers remain upon a sound basis of peace, harmony and friendship. A greater insistence upon justice to American citizens or interests wherever it may have been denied and a stronger emphasis of the need of mutually in commercial and other relations can only serve to strengthen our friendships with foreign countries by placing those friendships upon a firm foundation of realities as well as aspirations.

Reorganization of the State Department.

At the beginning of the present administration the United States, having fully entered upon its position as a world power, with the responsibilities thrust upon it by the results of the Spanish-American war, and already engaged in laying the groundwork of a vast foreign trade upon which it should one day become more and more dependent, found itself without the machinery for giving thorough attention to and taking effective action upon a mass of intricate business vital to American interests in every country in the world.

The department of state was an archaic and inadequate machine lacking most of the attributes of the foreign office of any great modern power. With an appropriation made upon my recommendation by the congress on August 8, 1909, the department of state was completely reorganized. There were created divisions of Latin American affairs and of far eastern, near eastern, and western European affairs. To these divisions were called from the foreign and diplomatic and consular officers possessing experience and knowledge gained by actual service in different parts of the world and thus familiar with political and commercial conditions in the regions concerned. The result is that where previously this government from time to time would emphasize in its foreign relations one or another policy, now American interests in every quarter of the globe are being coordinated with equal efficiency.

A greater insistence upon justice to American citizens or interests wherever it may have been denied and a stronger emphasis of the need of mutually in commercial and other relations can only serve to strengthen our friendships with foreign countries by placing those friendships upon a firm foundation of realities as well as aspirations.

Reorganization of the State Department.

At the beginning of the present administration the United States, having fully entered upon its position as a world power, with the responsibilities thrust upon it by the results of the Spanish-American war, and already engaged in laying the groundwork of a vast foreign trade upon which it should one day become more and more dependent, found itself without the machinery for giving thorough attention to and taking effective action upon a mass of intricate business vital to American interests in every country in the world.

The department of state was an archaic and inadequate machine lacking most of the attributes of the foreign office of any great modern power. With an appropriation made upon my recommendation by the congress on August 8, 1909, the department of state was completely reorganized. There were created divisions of Latin American affairs and of far eastern, near eastern, and western European affairs. To these divisions were called from the foreign and diplomatic and consular officers possessing experience and knowledge gained by actual service in different parts of the world and thus familiar with political and commercial conditions in the regions concerned. The result is that where previously this government from time to time would emphasize in its foreign relations one or another policy, now American interests in every quarter of the globe are being national finances and from the ever present danger of international complications due to disorder at home. With these considerations in mind, to encourage and support American citizens who were willing to lend their aid to the financial rehabilitation of such countries became the fundamental policy of the department of state. The protection of their custom-houses from being the prey of would-be dictators would remove at one stroke the menace of foreign creditors, and the maintenance of their financial stability would remove at once the danger of international complications.

The second advantage to the United States in such a policy, chiefly all the southern and gulf ports, and the business and industry of the region. The republics of Central America and the Caribbean possess great natural wealth, they need only a measure of stability and the means of financial regeneration to enter upon an era of peace and prosperity, bringing profit and happiness to themselves, and at the same time, creating conditions of high benevolence and good will towards the United States.

I wish to call your special attention to the recent occurrences in Nicaragua, for I believe the terrible events recorded there during the protraction of the past summer have been one of the most ghastly and cruel scenes of the life of the modern world. The bombardment of defenseless cities, the killing and wounding of women and children, the torturing of non-combatants to exact contributions, and the suffering of thousands of helpless people have been the result of the department of state, through approval of the loan convention to carry out its now well established policy of encouraging the extending of financial aid to weak Central American states with the primary objects of avoiding just such revolutions by assisting their finances, to establish their currency on a stable basis, to remove the custom houses from the danger of revolutions by arranging for their secure administration, and to establish reliable banks.

Agricultural Credits.

A most important work, accomplished in the past year by the American diplomatic officers in Europe, is the investigation of the agricultural credit system in European countries. Both as a means to afford relief to the consumers of this country through a more thorough development of agricultural resources and as a means of more efficiently maintaining the agricultural population, the project to establish credit facilities for the farmers is a concern of vital importance to this nation. No evidence of prosperity among well-established farmers should blind us to the fact that lack of capital is preventing the development of the nation's agricultural resources and an adequate increase of the land under cultivation; that agricultural production is fast falling behind the increase in population; and that, in fact, although these well-established farmers are maintaining in increasing prosperity because of the natural increase in population, we are not developing the industry of agriculture.

The need of capital which American farmers feel today has been especially acute in the case of Europe, with its age. The problem had been successfully solved in the old world and it was evident that the farmers of this country might profit by a study of their systems. I therefore, ordered, through the department of state, an investigation to be made by the diplomatic officers in Europe, and I have laid the results of this investigation before the members of the various state legislatures with the hope that they will be used to advantage in their forthcoming meetings.

Increase of Foreign Trade.

In my last annual message I said that the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, was noteworthy for the high record of exports of American products to foreign countries. The fiscal year 1912 shows that this rate of advance has been maintained. The total domestic exports during the fiscal year 1912 amounted to $1,100,000,000, an increase of $100,000,000 over the previous year. It is also significant that the manufactured and partly manufactured articles continue to be the dominant commodities in our foreign trade.

The importance which our manufacturers have attached to the expansion of the world in competition with the manufactured goods of other countries again draws attention to the duty of this government to use its resources to the utmost to develop the export trade of American products in all markets.

Healthy commercial rivalry in international intercourse is being fostered by the possession of proper tariff for protecting and promoting our foreign trade. It is natural that competitive countries should view with some concern this steady expansion of our commerce. If in some instances the measure taken by them to meet it are not entirely equitable, a remedy should be sought in the former messages. I have described the negotiations of the department of state with foreign governments for the adjustment of the maximum and minimum tariff as provided in section 1 of the tariff law of 1909. The advantages secured by the adjustment of our trade relations under this law have continued during the last year, and some additional cases of discrimination have been reported to which we had reason to complain have been removed. The department of state has for the first time in the history of this country obtained substantial most-favored-nation treatment from all the countries of the world. There have been other instances which, while apparently not constituting unfair discrimination in the sense of section 1, are nevertheless exceptions to the complete equality of tariff treatment for a country which has the advantage of state consistently has sought to obtain for American commerce abroad special advantages.

Necessity for Supplementary Legislation.

These developments confirm the opinion conveyed to you in my annual message of 1911 that the maximum and minimum provision of the tariff law of 1909 has been fully justified by the success achieved in removing previously existing undue discriminations against American products and in securing the most favorable treatment of our goods in foreign markets.

I am not for altogether recommending to congress the passage of some such enabling measure as the bill which was recommended by the secretary of state in his letter of December 15, 1911. The object of such legislation is, in brief, to enable the executive to apply, as the case may require, to any or all commodities whether or not on the free list from the tariff which discriminated against the United States, a graduated scale of duties up to the maximum of 10 per cent ad valorem provided in the present law. Flat tariffs are out of the question.

The message told what the government has done in connection with the Mexican war and the debt of the government of Mexico. It is not to be paid. The new condition of affairs in China was set forth, and then our relations with Central and South American governments were discussed in more detail.

Congress should fully realize the conditions which obtain in the world as to the maintenance of the threshold of our middle-aged nations. We have entered into a new era with the great concerns of nations. We have passed through various formative periods. We have been self-sufficient in the struggle of development, domestic responsibilities have been met, and we have now entered upon a new era of international relations.

Our relations with the world are now upon a new basis. We have passed through various formative periods. We have been self-sufficient in the struggle of development, domestic responsibilities have been met, and we have now entered upon a new era of international relations.

Ample Sleeping Accommodations.
A man who owns a 160-acre farm in California has discovered the largest bedroom in the world. One day he hired a new hand and spoke to him very kindly, welcoming him to the meals at the family table and telling him he could have access to all the reading matter in the house.

"But where shall I sleep?" asked the new employee.

"Young man," said the farmer, "that is immaterial to me. You see about you one hundred and sixty acres, and any part of that land which looks good to you as a place to sleep is at your disposal."—Popular Magazine.

$300 FIGHTING TWINE BILL

MANUFACTURE IN PENITENTIARY PREVENTED AS RESULT.

Agent for Harvester Trust Gives Testimony at St. Louis Hearing.

St. Louis, Dec. 4.—That as agent for the International Harvester company he spent $300 a day in 1905 to kill a bill pending in the South Dakota legislature which would have authorized the manufacture of binding twine in the state penitentiary was testified to by Michael H. Lamb of Winston, Texas, at the opening session of the St. Louis hearing in the government's suit to dissolve the International Harvester company. Testimony was taken before Special Examiner Robert Taylor of Duluth.

Lamb, who was formerly a general agent of the International Harvester company and later of the International, testified that when the bill came up he consulted John H. Howler, former warden of the penitentiary, and being told it would take money to defeat the bill, he wrote to Henry L. Dutela, general manager of the International.

"A few days later I received a package of new $20 bills, with instructions to turn the money over to Howler," Lamb declared. He explained he thought the money was a contribution, not a bribe.

He also testified that he paid $50 or $100 in a reporter to write an editorial against the passage of the twine bill.

The witness narrated a conversation with Harold L. McCormick in Chicago in January, 1907, in which McCormick complimented him for his loyalty in the past to the McCormick company, but told him that hereafter he was to be the other man's man.

He was controlled by the International Harvester company with the same spirit as he had shown in handling the McCormick make.

Although not subpoenaed as a witness, John H. Howler, former warden of the South Dakota penitentiary, appeared in the room during the hearing "to protect his interests," he said.

Newspaper Law is Argued.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Great argument on the constitutionality of the newspaper publicity law has been begun before the supreme court of the United States. Robert C. Morris, on behalf of the New York Journal of Commerce, attacked the law as abridging the freedom of the press, while Solicitor General Hall defended the act as merely imposing additional conditions under which newspapers may obtain the second-class mail privileges.

Wilson at Tariff Debate.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Dec. 4.—Woodrow Wilson heard the first tariff discussion since his election as president of the United States. He visited the Bermuda Islands, where he was loudly cheered and sat among the members for three hours listening to the debate on the vegetable schedules and observing the methods of budget legislation. Mr. Wilson said he thought that a yearly tariff conference, as the tariff schedule, such as obtains in Denmark, would be impracticable.

Johnson Will Wed Miss Cameron.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Jack Johnson, in an interview declared that before the end of the week he would marry Miss Lucile Cameron, the Minneapolis girl, with whom he has been in a romantic relationship since his arrival in the federal penitentiary charging the negro with violation of the Mann law.

LOOK AFTER YOUR HEALTH

If Your System is Kept Tamed Up You Will Escape Many Diseases That Find Early Victims Among Pale People.

Enough disease germs enter the average human body every day to cause death if the healthy organism did not combat these germs and render them harmless.

Let the human system become run down, or debilitated, and this power of resistance to disease is weakened. Soon the disease germs take the upper hand, and the healthy organism or the patient becomes a chronic invalid.

It is in the blood that the battle to maintain the health is fought. Keep the blood clean, and the bowels open, and observe ordinary care as regards food and rest and you will avoid much sickness.

Debility is not a recognized disease but is a condition in which the sufferer cannot eat a good night's sleep, wakes up all tired out, has no strength or energy, is nervous, has a poor appetite, has trouble with the stomach, and is subject to headaches and backaches. It is most commonly met with in people who have to work hard, are confined indoors, eat improper food or have worries and grief.

The case of Mrs. M. V. McCaslin, of No. 302 South 17th Street, Lincoln, Neb., shows the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic for all run-down conditions of health. She says:

"I gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a trial for general debility from which I had been suffering about three years. I was thoroughly tired and worn out and had no ambition for anything. I became very weak and kept losing strength. My appetite was poor and I was nervous and had severe headaches."

"I needed a tonic treatment and tried several tonic remedies but none seemed to help me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was soon much improved in health and able to get around and do my work. I took the pills until cured and am pleased to recommend them to anyone who is run down in health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 60 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Send today for a copy of our free booklet, "Diseases of the Blood."

Getting Even.

"Your first name is June, is it, little girl?"

"Yes, sir; only I don't spell it the way most folks do."

"How do you spell it?"

"Do you s'pose I'm going to let the Moes get ahead of me when it comes to spelling names different?"

WOMEN SHOULD NEVER USE HARSH PHYSICS

Women are especially susceptible to constipation and their more delicate organisms rebel at the violence of "harsh" cathartics. "Dr. Caldwell's" medicines like salts, mineral waters, pills and powders may afford temporary relief, but their violent action on the stomach and bowels tends to upset the entire system.

A mild laxative is far preferable and more effective. The combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin prescribed by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, and sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for women, being gentle in action, positive in effect and pleasant to the taste.

A spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night will bring natural relief next morning and cure irregularity for a period. It will strengthen and tone the muscles of the stomach and bowels, that there will be little if any further need for medicine.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be depended on to cure irregularity of the bowels and give you a good night's sleep. W. B. Caldwell, 205 West St. Monticello, Ill., will bring a free trial bottle by return mail. Adv.
