The Cow, The Silo & The Plain

The tin can has become a mark of civilization. It represents the mastery that the civilized man has acquired over the ordinary laws of nature. The yield of the vegetable kingdom is ordinarily sufficient for the sustenance of both man and beast. It would always be so if there were no perishables—fruit and vegetables and meat and grain could be preserved in the days of plenty against the days of want. Joseph, during the seven years of plenty, stored up a sufficient amount of unperishable grain to carry the Egyptians over a period of seven year famine. But they must have become mightily hungry for green stuff curing those long

The tin can has made it possible for the modern Joseph to preserve green things that men like to eat during the years of famine. The tin can has not only greatly extended the market of vegetable products as to time, but it has greatly facilitated the transportation of perishables from one latitude to another. The progress of the explorer, the surveyor and the railroad builder is marked by a string of tin cans.

What the tin can is to civilized humanity the silo is to live-stock. The progress of the dairy interests is marked by the silo. The principles in the preservation of fruits and garden truck are the same as those involved in the preservation of ensilage. It is simply a question of keeping out the air. The tin can is sealed while the air has been driven off by heat, the object being to reduce the oxygen in the can to a minimum. For the preservation of ensilage, the object always is to exclude the air. This is accomplished by cutting the silage in such a way that it will pack itself, the interspaces being occupied by the juice of the green material or by the water added. The silo in this country dates back to about the year 1875. Since then there has been much talk about the various kinds of silos, the material to be employed in their construction, their filling, and the best way to preserve it.

Within the last few years the construction of underground silos has come into vogue. A pit from fifteen to twenty-five feet is dug and the walls cemented or brick and plastered. The advantages of the underground silo are: first—cheapness; second—freedom from frost and injuries from wind and weather.

It is not absolutely necessary in order to preserve ensilage to have an especial building constructed after model plans. An old house with plastered walls makes a fairly good silo, or any inclosure into which green material may be crowded to exclude the air will preserve it a reasonable time.

Any kind of forage crop may be converted into ensilage. Corn by reason of its succulent nature, kafir, milo, and the whole sorghum family make good ensilage. Alfalfa and clover are easily preserved in this way, and in fact most any of the grasses can be taken directly from the field when damp and placed in storage with much less trouble than curing them in the field and hauling them to the barn or stock pen. The best region between the north and south meridian and the Married at Sims.

Saturday evening at eight o'clock at the home of the bride's uncle, John Jacobson at Sims: Miss Millie Anderson was united in marriage to Mr. Ole C. Ellingson of this place. Rev. L. A. Green of the Evangelical church performed the ceremony in the presence of a few immediate relatives and friends.

Immediately after the ceremony a sumptuous wedding supper was served. Mrs. Ellingson is one of the popular young women in the Sims society circles, and O. C. Ellingson has been in business in this place for several years and is also assistant postmaster. The young couple came to Almont Sunday and commenced housekeeping in the rooms above their store. They will be at home to their many friends after May tenth.

Ramsland-Wohlmann

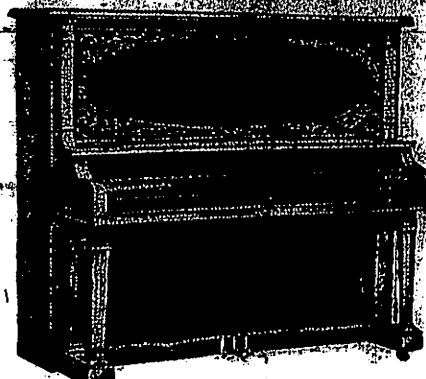

Monday afternoon, April 28th, Miss Susan Wohlmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Math Wohlmann, was united in marriage to Mr. Teunus Ramsland at the bride's home near this place, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

Immediately following the ceremony dinner was served the many guests and later in the evening a dance followed. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsland commenced housekeeping on the former's homestead west of Almont.

ages less than twenty inches, the growing of corn and ordinary farm crops is somewhat uncertain, not because the rainfall is insufficient to mature a crop, but because the farmers now occupying this region are not sufficiently acquainted with the methods necessary to conserve the moisture, to be sure of results. Under these conditions the dairy cow and the silo are veritable goldens. There never was a year so dry, but by a reasonable exercise of care crops of corn, milo, kafir, and sorghum that would run from three to six tons per acre could not be raised. These crops properly siloed will furnish abundant feed for the dairy herd during the winter and the periods of drouth, when the pasture is short. With the ready market for cream and the possibilities for abundant ensilage, there is no reason why the entire plains country with its fifteen inches of rainfall cannot be made profitable as a stock and dairy country.

The above is from Silos and Ensilage, by Richard A. Hans, director of instruction of the Campbell Correspondence School of Soil Culture. Silos and Ensilage is one of the books that comprise the Dry Farming Course in that school. Professor Campbell, who is known the world over as the "father of dry farming," or as "the farmer who discovered another half of the world," is giving his system of scientific farming to the public through this great school (the only one of its kind in the United States) and the SCIENTIFIC FARMER, published at Lincoln, Nebraska.

The instruction given in this institution covers not only Dry Farming, but Horticulture, Irrigation, Soil Tillage, Small Farming and Farm Engineering. The agricultural college is thus brought to the door of every ambitious young farmer, and the problem of higher agricultural education is thus solved.

The Grand Prize

Piano and Watches Will Be Given Absolutely Free

You want a piano, or a watch and we offer you this opportunity to get one absolutely free of charge by gathering votes. It is very simple and you need to devote but little of your time to get one.

Come to our office or write us and we will give you a receipt book. Then you can go among your friends and ask them to pay you their subscription to the Arena. Bring the money to us and we will give you votes for every yearly subscription. If you devote a full day to the work you can collect considerable amount, as our subscribers would just as soon pay you as to pay it at this office. We have many dollars outstanding and it will be no trouble for you to collect your share.

A contest is a business proposition. It shows the ambition of a candidate and is the making of a future for a young lady. Manufacturers by the thousands are looking for girls who can get out and hustle and show what they are made of. Ambition is a determination and if you stick to it you will be successful.

When you make a purchase ask for votes, as nearly all the merchants here them and are pleased to issue them with cash sales. Request your friends and relatives to give votes for you. We want you to take one of the prizes we are offering and as we have more prizes than candidates you should send in your name immediately.

Don't do like some girls, spend your time wishing you had one of these valuable prizes, but sign the accompanying ballot in this issue, clip out the contestant's ballot and go after a prize.

Some girls grasp the opportunity and get a watch; others spend their time talking about it.

Tear off here.

Fill Out and Send in Promptly.

An Elgin Gold watch for every girl who acts promptly in filling out the space below and sending it in according to the rules and regulations of the contest.

Good for 50 Votes.

Make Trip Overland.

On Monday, George W. Lane and wife will begin a six hundred mile drive from this place to their former home at Bruce, Wisconsin. The trip is planned will take about six weeks and starting at this time of the year, the family should enjoy every mile of the way as they will pass thru Dakota, Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin during the most favorable time of the year—when crops are beginning to grow and fruit trees in full bloom.

Ed. White, of Bismarck, Copekin's Candy Mid., transacted business in this place the latter part of this week.

Merchants' coupons cost you nothing extra, ask for them.

Are you receiving your share of the merchants' coupons.

Home Locals.

Miss Christine and Messrs. Joseph and Steven, Fitzrick of Glen Ullin arrived here Sunday last to visit a couple of days at the Math Wohlmann home, also to take in the wedding of Miss Wohlmann. They returned to Glen Ullin Tuesday afternoon.

Doc. Melvin Larson of the Heart River country, was assisting R. A. Miller bring his goods to town for shipment, Monday, and was one of the gallery gods at the function held in front of the post-office Monday evening about 10 o'clock.

Ed. O. Schmitz of the Glen Ullin News, transacted business in this village the fore part of the week. He returned to Glen Ullin Tuesday afternoon on No. 7.

Miss Mina Asved of the Ripples country was an Almont shopper, Tuesday afternoon.

IT SAVES 2 HORSES

The Cushman Binder motor is one of the greatest inventions for the farmer that has been put out for a number of years and it is being used in every part of the state with gratifying results. In all the places in which it has been tried, it has performed the work set for it and has demonstrated that any binder equipped with it can be run with only two horses no matter as to the condition of the field. It is light, easily attached and wholly comprehensible with no intricate mechanism. One of these motors will soon be on exhibition at the warehouses of J. Nelson & Son.

RETURNED TO IOWA

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Miller left Tuesday, for their former home at La Porte City, Iowa, after four years on a farm a few miles south of town. On their arrival in Almont, they lost all of their household effects in the fire that destroyed the greater part of the town, but gathering more goods set out to make a home and success. That they succeeded is apparent for a few weeks ago they sold their farm for $25 an acre and also sold a lot of machinery and livestock.

While the people regret to lose this progressive farmer and his wife, all wish them unlimited success in the future, wherever they may roam.

INJURED FOOT.

Monday night while stirring up a bunch of fellows to give Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Ellingson an old time "burning" in the darkness, Neil Gillis struck his foot against a saw and severed an artery which bled profusely for a couple of hours. Doc Melvin Larson improvised a tourniquet and succeeded in stopping the flow of blood. Neil is getting along nicely and will soon be able to be around again.

Monday morning, Fred Vollrath who has had charge of the Merchants hotel for the past few months, closed the doors and immediately moved his goods to another place. Lack of business and the poor health of his wife were the reasons given for the giving up of the hotel. Tuesday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Pippel entered and opened the hotel and will give the people of Almont first class service.

A. F. Banke, jewelry, smoking agent, piano salesman, nursery stock collector and editor of the German section of the New Salem Journal, was an Almont business visitor, Tuesday. While here he made a few deliveries of trees and shrubbery that the Almont people are so glad to beautify their homes.

"We wish to call attention to the new advertising appearing in this week's issue of the Arena. E. W. Hyde has a new ad for his place of business. A. F. Banke of New Salem is represented. O. C. Ellingson has a new ad and G. C. Chamberlain representing the Avery Co. has also a new piece of space."

Nick Peterson, hit the Grand Forks, Alberta, Wednesday. In a letter stating, "I confirmed a hole shot remarked; "It's high-time I made my get-away from Almont, or they will have me getting carried to, so I'm off for Canada."

LEARN FARMING.

Agriculture is best taught to boys and girls by having them bring to school their own data for arithmetic, English, Botany, chemistry, entomology and other nature studies. By thus bringing the actual data they can learn the rudiments in a most practical manner. They should be taught to judge distance with the eye and by comparison. In this way they can learn to measure the height of a tree, the bulk of cord wood and tan bark, the capacity of wagon boxes, of silos and of haystacks. They will learn how to combat the injurious insects and noxious weeds. They will learn how to feed cattle and all the problems pertaining to the cost of food rations, and who pays it. They will learn the different methods of building sheds and barns; how to paint and how to paper. They will learn how to make practical application of everything that comes to their notice. It will get the boys and girls in the habit of doing their own figuring, and they will get a lot of fun out of it. It will be the basis of rural prosperity. Head work pays on the farm as well as anywhere. This method will furnish the one needful thing in making home life pure and more prosperous. We need less high-brow science and more gumption, and the way to obtain it is to start the boys and girls to using their wits instead of taking things ready-made out of a book.

Neil Gillis was a New Salem visitor, Wednesday of this week, where he went to have his foot attended to by one of the physicians of that place.

Charles Risworth who has been visiting in the northern part of the state for the past few days returned to Almont this week.

All the leading merchants are giving coupons, be sure and ask for them.

Only the misses and Mrs. can secure prizes, but be sure you have the Misses working for you.

Free Planting to Be Encouraged

Grand Forks, May 2.—One of the improvements most needed in North Dakota is more trees. If our farmers and land men would appreciate the difference that trees will make in the value of a farm in the eyes of the prospective purchaser from the east and south, more trees would be planted and made to grow. Trees can be grown very readily in North Dakota. In address before the Commercial Club at Grand Forks recently a western North Dakota farmer touched the problem as follows:

"The time was not very far in the past when eastern North Dakota lay out before the observer a seemingly boundless verdant prairie. With the exception of a narrow strip along the bank of the river it was almost treeless. Today one of the most noticeable features of this vast territory is its multiplied groves of Maple, Box Elder, Elm, and various other trees of the hardies form supplying the much needed shade for the hot summer months, and the almost necessary wind brake for the cold stormy periods of winter. The effect of this tree growth upon the climatic conditions in the valley has been very pronounced. According to statements furnished by the very early settlers the storm that sweeps the valley now can no way be compared in violence and duration to those thirty or more years ago. The intensity seems to have increased and with the breaking of the prevailing wind currents evaporation has been materially lessened.

What has been in the eastern part of the state can be done in the Central and western part as well. To encourage tree culture, the three banks of Dickinson and Stark County have offered cash prizes for the best acre of trees. The requirements of this contest are as follows: First, Each acre of trees must be planted this spring, 913. Second, There shall be not less than $1,000 trees planted on each acre. Third, The rows of trees shall not be more than 16 feet apart.

The premiums will be awarded this fall by competent judges. $15.00 will be the reward for the first Best acres of trees. $10.00 will be the reward for the second Best acre of trees. $5.00 will be the reward for the third Best acre of trees.

A New Story by John Breckenridge Ellis

An extraordinary tale is FRAN - it will achieve a great degree of popularity. - Chicago Journal.

Along with the force that subdues, looking out of Fran's big black eyes is the force that inevitably attracts. - New York World.

The direct, confidential style of the author fairly matches the bold spirit of Fran and lends added interest to her onward divinations of human nature. - Philadelphia North American.

The story reads from beginning to end with a directness which is charming. - Philadelphia Inquirer.
